PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

TUESDAY

8:26 a.m. - Someone broke into a Pilot Rock residence on Northeast Douglas Street and stole medications. 11:38 a.m. - A Pendleton officer responded to a juvenile complaint regarding an assault a Pendleton High School. 1:38 p.m. - A Umatilla resident on Rio Senda Drive told police she believed someone siphoned gas out of her car. 1:43 p.m. - Police in Milton-Freewater cleared out the U.S. Bank branch and shut down streets until bomb experts determined a duffel bag was not dangerous.

Milton-Freewater Police Chief Doug Boedigheimer reported employees at the bank, 610 E. Broadway Ave., noticed a red duffel bag sitting on an end table in the lobby. "They had not seen who put or left it there," Boedigheimer stated, "as such, it was of concern."

Employees asked police to check on the situation, and Milton-Freewater officers responded and without knowing who left it or what was inside considered it suspicious.

There was no threat made or communicated," according to Boedigheimer, "but bank employees reasonably perceived a safety concern, due to the overall suspicious nature of the circumstance.'

The employees evacuated and closed the bank, and vehicles in its west parking lot were moved to a safe distance. Police closed a portion of Broadway Avenue and sidewalks on adjacent Elizabeth Street.

The Oregon State Police bomb squad responded and used remote X-ray technology to determine there was nothing dangerous in the duffel. Police reopened the area at 5:44 p.m.

4:50 p.m. - Staff at Union Pacific Railroad's Hinkle rail yard reported one car derailed but there were no injuries and no need for emergency responders for hazardous materials.

6:08 p.m. - A caller reported a white, bald man in a T-shirt at the Red Lion Hotel, 304 S.E. Nye Ave., was talking to himself, punched a rock and may have been high.

STEPHEN HAWKING: 1942-2018 'His laboratory was the universe'

By SETH BORENSTEIN AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON Everyone knew of Stephen Hawking's cosmic brilliance, but few could comprehend it. Not even top-notch astronomers

Hawking, who died at his home in Cambridge, England, on Wednesday at age 76, became the public face of science genius. He appeared on "Star Trek: The Next Generation" and "The Big Bang Theory," voiced himself in "The Simpsons" cartoon series and wrote the best-seller "A Brief History of Time." He sold 9 million copies of that book, though many readers didn't finish it. It's been called "the least-read best-seller ever." Hollywood celebrated his life in the 2014 Oscar-winning biopic "The Theory of Everything

March 30, 2015. Hawking, whose brilliant mind ranged across time and space though his body was paralyzed by disease, has died, a family spokesman said early a big laugh. "You'd find the average astronomer such as myself doesn't even try to follow the more esoteric theories that (Hawking) pursued the last 20 years," Fabian said. "I've been to talks Hawking has given and cannot follow them myself."

Hawking, who was born 300 years to the day after Galileo died, was the Lucasian Professor of Mathematics at Cambridge University. It was the same post that Isaac Newton held. Both physicists and astrophysicists claimed him as their own. And much of Hawking's work was in the field of cosmology, a deep-thinking branch of astronomy that tries to explain the totality of the universe.

Hawking's title "is not relevant here; what matters is what his brain did, said Neil deGrasse Tyson, director of New York's Hayden Planetarium. "We claim him as an astrophysicist because his laboratory was the universe."

In some ways, Hawking was the inheritor of Albert Einstein's mantle of the genius-as-celebrity, and he died on the 139th anniversary of Einstein's birth.

"His contribution is to engage the public in a way that maybe hasn't happened since Einstein," said prominent astronomer Wendy Freedman, former director of the Carnegie Observatories. "He's become an icon for a mind that is beyond ordinary mortals. People don't exactly understand what he's saying, but they know he's brilliant. There's perhaps a human element of his struggle that makes people stop and pay attention.'

With Einstein, most people are familiar with e=mc2, but they don't know what it means. With Hawking, his work was too complicated for most people, but they understood that what he was trying to figure out was basic, even primal.

"He was asking and trying to address the very biggest questions we were trying to ask: the birth of the universe, black holes, the direction of time," said University Chicago cosmologist of Michael Turner. "I think that caught people's attention." And he did so in an impish way, showing humanity despite being in a wheelchair with ALS, the degenerative nerve disorder known in the U.S. as Lou Gehrig's disease. He flew in a zero-gravity plane. He made public bets with other scientists about the existence of black holes and radiation that emanates from them — losing both bets and buying a subscription to Penthouse for one scientist and a baseball encyclopedia for the other.

The first thing that catches you is the debilitating disease and his wheelchair,' Turner said. But then his mind and the "joy that he took in science" dominated. And while the public may not have understood what he said, they got his quest for big ideas, Turner said.

Andy Fabian, an astronomer at Hawking's University of Cambridge and president of the Royal Astronomical Society, said Hawking would start his layman's lectures on black holes with the joke: "I assume you all have read 'A Brief History of Time' and understood it." It always got

And Hawking's black hole work in the mid-1970s made a crucial connection in physics. Until Hawking discovered radiation coming from black holes - named "Hawking radiation" after him — the two giant theories in physics, Einstein's general relativity and quantum mechanics, often conflicted. Hawking was the first to show they connected, which Turner and others described as breakthrough at the time.

The concept that stuff, radiation, comes out of black holes may have upset science fiction authors, but it inspired young scientists such as Tyson, who described it as "spooky profound."
