Arts center wrangles in works of Louise Bourgeois

East Oregonian

Jordan D. Schnitzer's connection to Pendleton Round-Up is providing area residents with an opportunity to enjoy the artwork of Louise Bourgeois.

Considered one of the most important artists of the 20th century, prints by the contemporary master are on loan from Schnitzer and the Jordan Schnitzer Family Foundation. The exhibition opens Friday with a reception from 6-7:30 p.m. at Pendleton Center for the Arts, 214 N. Main St. The event is free and open to the public.

Louise Bourgeois (1911-2010) was born on Christmas Day in Paris. As a young girl she worked in her family's tapestry restoration studio. Buying her own small press, she later began making prints in the late-1930s when she emigrated to New York.

Turning her focus to sculpture, Bourgeois abandoned printmaking for four decades. She resumed printmaking in the late-1980s while exploring a fascination with textiles, architecture, spiders and the body. She also used her artwork to share childhood stories, including difficult subjects like World War I, her mother's illness and her parents' troubled marriage.

Schnitzer, who has been a major Round-Up sponsor for nearly 20 years, also has funded a college scholarship program for the Round-Up court and Happy Canyon princesses. A spectator at Round-Up for nearly 40 years, he was extremely responsive when Roberta Lavadour, arts center executive director, first reached out to him in the spring of 2016 to inquire about loaning part of his collection for an exhibition. That resulted in a 2017 display showcasing the work of Chuck Close, an iconic artist who lives near Seattle. Schnitzer previously loaned prints from nearly two dozen nationally and internationally known artists for a 2003 exhibit in Pendleton in 1981 and since then have been so appreciative of the wonderful hospitality of everyone in Pendleton and have cherished the wonderful friendships that I have made with people in Pendleton," Schnitzer said. "I feel like it's my second and operates real estate properties in six western states, including the former Wells Fargo bank branch on Pendleton's Main Street.

We helped support the founding of the Pendleton Center for the Arts and are thrilled this is our third exhibition at the center," Schnitzer said. "I hope that everyone in the community visits to understand why Louise Bourgeois is recognized as one of the most important

The exhibit will remain on display through May 5. Admission is free. Gallery hours are Tuesday through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from noon to 4 p.m. In addition, groups can make arrangements for special after-hours visits during the Bourgeois exhibit. Bourgeois' work was recently featured as a major exhibit at Museum of Modern Art in New York City. Extensive information about her life and artwork can be viewed at www.moma.org. There is also a documentary about her life and work currently on Amazon.
