

VACCINE: Parents not required to give a reason for objecting to immunization against vaccine-preventable diseases such as whooping cough and measles.”

But the decline in vaccinations has coincided with outbreaks of vaccine-preventable disease. More than a dozen students in Lane County, including two at the University of Oregon in Eugene, contracted whooping cough earlier this spring, according to media reports. In December, about a dozen cases of the disease were reported at schools in Clark County, Washington, across the Columbia River from Portland.

The Oregon law requires parents who seek a nonmedical exemption to receive education about the risks of foregoing immunization from one of two sources. They can opt to submit documentation that they have watched an educational video on the health authority’s website or have consulted with a healthcare provider. About 95 percent of parents choose to provide documentation of watching the online video, de Assis Matthews said.

“That is not to say parents aren’t talking to health care providers,” she said. “Anecdotally, we are hearing from healthcare providers that they do have discussions with parents and if parents are still wanting to claim an exemption, the providers ask them to watch the online video.”

Parents are not required to give a reason for their objection to immunizations.

The anti-vaccination movement dates back to 1998 when a reputable medical journal, The Lancet, published a study by British physician Andrew Wakefield who claimed there might be a link between the measles, mumps and rubella vaccination and autism, though the study was subsequently and overwhelmingly debunked by the vast majority of researchers, according to a 2013 history by the Columbia Journalism Review.

Rates of autism continue to rise every year. The most recent data from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention showed the development disorder affects one out of every 59 children in a count of 11 communities across the United States.

The scare over vaccinations started gain momentum in 1999 when the Federal Drug Administration found that there was no evidence that thimerosal in vaccines was harmful but as a precaution, recommended removing the ingredient from vaccines given to infants.

The panic intensified in 2000 when former British Prime Minister Tony Blair and his wife declined to disclose whether their son, Leo, had been immunized, according to the Columbia Journalism Review. Years later, the couple said he had, in fact, been vaccinated on schedule, the CJR reported.

Subsequent studies by the CDC have found no evidence to support a link between vaccines and autism.

In 2015, Oregon Sen. Elizabeth Steiner Hayward, D-Beaverton, proposed a law to eliminate philosophical exemptions to mandatory vaccines, but she later withdrew the legislation after hearing opposition from both Democrats and Republicans.

LITERACY: Summer readers ready for some fun about the opportunity to read new books,” she said.

Two other groups in the Language Arts class are working on other literacy projects, Lougee said. One group created a community book club, which she said will eventually become a service and literacy club. Their first book is “The Education of Margo Sanchez,” by Lilliam Rivera. The other group is hosting a book fair at McNary Heights Elementary School on Thursday, where high schoolers will get to spend time with the younger students and give them each a book to take home.

“A big issue with low-income communities is access to print,” Lougee said. “They don’t have space or money to take home books. So we’re trying to provide ways for people in the community to just have access to text.”

Hermiston

The Hermiston Library will offer its annual summer reading program, for children, teens and adults. The program, called “Libraries Rock,” runs from June 11 to July 26, and children are expected to read (or, if they’re younger than second grade, have read to them) 30 picture books of their choice, or five chapter books. Kids in third through fifth grade can read five chapter books of their choice. Each week, kids can turn in their reading log to win a prize.

Additionally, there are activities each week, including movies, scavenger hunts, art projects, and “Summer of Scales,” where kids can get a look at reptiles and other exotic animals with animal expert Corbin Maxey.

Hermiston Library Assistant Angie Villegas said there are summer reading programs for teens and adults as well. Teens have to commit to reading a certain number of pages, and come to at least eight different activities throughout the summer. Activities for teens include trivia, karaoke, music Jeopardy, an escape room, and a book club.

Villegas said last year, the summer reading program had about 350 children participate, as well as 75 teens and 50 adults.

“We’ve remained steady,” she said. “It’s a family activity, and it gives them the opportunity to do something fun, and get away from the craziness. Hopefully they can get away from technology for a while.”

Visit the library at 235 E. Gladys Ave., Hermiston, for more details.

Pendleton

Pendleton’s all-ages summer reading program runs from June 11 to August 11. Kids and teens can turn in their reading logs, which track every time they read 30 minutes, at the end of the summer for a free book. Adults can record each book they read, and be entered into a drawing for a prize.

Jennifer Costley, the assistant library director, said enthusiasm is usually high for reading programs at the beginning of the summer. Though the return rate of reading logs tend to drop, she said many people just enjoy an excuse to get out and do something different.

“During the summer, my shelves are bare,” she said.

“I think it’s because there’s no more required reading, so they really are reading for fun.”

Costley said there will be events at the library throughout the summer, including, as in Hermiston, the reptile show, and a party of some kind each month, including a lawn party in July. For a complete list of activities, visit the library at 502 S.W. Dorion Ave., Pendleton, or visit their Facebook page.

For those looking to contribute to the shelves with their own work, local author Bette Husted suggested the First Draft Writers Series in Pendleton, which meets the third Thursday of each month, and features the work of local and regional authors.

Husted herself will headline June’s session, reading from her new book, “All Coyote’s Children.”

The event also has an open mic section, which allows those in attendance to share their own work. The June event will take place at 7 p.m. at the Pendleton Center for the Arts, 214 N. Main St., Pendleton.

CULINARY: Moved program to a full commercial kitchen at the Trade Center

She was also involved in moving the culinary program from the high school’s main building to a full commercial kitchen at the Pendleton Tech and Trade Center, providing a tour of the kitchen and classroom space when Gov. Kate Brown visited the center in April.

With increased interest in the high school culinary program came increased interest in culinary careers, and Swaggart worked to connect kids with restaurant work and college culinary arts programs.

Swaggart did not return requests for comment.

Missouri governor resigns amid widening investigations

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens, a sometimes brash political outsider whose unconventional resume as a Rhodes scholar and Navy SEAL officer made him a rising star in the Republican Party, resigned Tuesday amid a widening investigation that arose from an affair with his former hairdresser.

The 44-year-old governor spent almost six months fighting to stay in office after the affair became public in January. The probes into his conduct by prosecutors and lawmakers began with allegations stemming from the affair and expanded to include questions about whether he violated campaign-finance laws.

Greitens said he would resign Friday. Those pressuring Greitens to step down included many Republicans.
