Oregon man claims Powerball jackpot; takes $61M lump sum

SALEM (AP) — The man who bought a $150 million Powerball ticket in Oregon last month has claimed his prize.

Lottery officials said Friday that Steven Nickell carried the winning ticket in his wallet for two weeks before finding out he had all the right numbers in the June 20 drawing.

The Salem resident has opted to take a lump sum of $61 million. He and his wife have hired a financial planner and a lawyer, and they plan to be careful with their spending. Their goal is to make sure their family is taken care of for a long time.

This is the fifth time a winning Powerball jackpot ticket has been sold in Oregon.

Suicidal climber air-lifted from Mount Hood

PORTLAND (AP) — An Oregon Army National Guard has lifted a stranded climber and six rescuers from the summit of Mount Hood.

State search and rescue coordinator Scott Lucas tells KGW-TV the climber chose Oregon's tallest peak as the place to end his life and then changed his mind when he got to the top. The man then needed assistance to get back down.

The Clackamas County Sheriff's Office contacted search and rescue volunteers about the situation Thursday, and they found the man Friday morning.

Video from the scene shows a group of people around the injured climber. The climber appears to be wrapped in a sleeping bag. The extent of the climber's injury has not been released.

Gearhart latest coast city to consider beach wheelchairs

GEARHART (AP) — Cannon Beach, Manzanita and Seaside all provide beach wheelchairs for people with disabilities. Gearhart could be the next North Coast city to try it.

The Daily Astorian reports that the man who helped start the Seaside program went the Gearhart City Council this week to propose a similar service. Randy Anderson offered to launch the program by donating a wheelchair.

Gearhart Mayor Matt Brown said he's very interested in seeing the idea come to fruition. Seaside's beach wheelchair program opened for free public rentals in July. The first person to use it was a 16-year-old girl.
