News of the invite appeared to catch even the president's top intelligence official by surprise.

Then on Thursday, the White House said Trump “disagrees” with Putin’s

"If the Russians want a better relationship, trips to the White House aren't going to help," he added. "They should stop invad-

Senate Republicans joined Democrats in swiftly passing a resolution, 98-0, that put the Senate on record against the questioning of American officials by a foreign government.
