Get Some R&R

Ever finished a vacation that was so exhausting that you felt like you needed another vacation to recuperate? When you're in a new place, you want to spend as much time as possible visiting museums, hiking, seeing the sights and exploring. It's fun, but it can get tiring.

© ADOBE STOCK

A staycation, while it should always include a little exploration, can be more relaxing. Real Simple Magazine suggested activities to include in your staycation planning to help you enjoy your down time.

READ A BOOK

Vacations offer lots of reading time, be it waiting at the airport or riding a train. Just because you're not traveling doesn't mean you should miss any of that quality reading time. The hot afternoon hours are a great time to wile away with a good book and a glass of lemonade or iced tea. Want a change of scenery from your living room? Set up a hammock in the yard, go to a local coffee-house or take a blanket to your closest park and enjoy the sun while you read.

SLEEP IN OR TAKE A NAP

You're on vacation! You may have days that are packed with activities and don't leave time for this, but work in nap time or free time or a late start to the day so you don't have to set an alarm.

UNPLUG

Leave your phone at home or put it on airplane mode. That way you won't feel the need to check email, scroll through Twitter or wonder who might be trying to get hold of you. Give yourself permission to truly check out and enjoy your vacation. Leave your watch at home too.

ORDER IN

This could mean ordering pizza or Chinese food from the restaurant down the street or, with a little planning, it could mean ordering Maryland crab legs, Maine lobster rolls or Omaha steaks, allowing you to bring the food of somewhere else into your living room. To make things a little fancier, eat outside by candlelight, preferably barefoot so you can enjoy the feeling of grass on your feet. Find a good summer soundtrack – maybe your favorite beach music, or a relaxing classical sound, or something French or Italian that transports you elsewhere.
