

TRADES: Harper remains with Nationals

off race even after trading away Gerrit Cole and Andrew McCutchen in the offseason.

"They're super-hot right now, and they want me," Archer said. "I'm excited to be part of the organization that wants me, part of a rich baseball history, a hard-working community. I can't wait to get there."

The Rays sent former All-Star catcher Ramos to NL East-leading Philadelphia, while Leonys Martin, Kevin Gausman and Cameron Maybin also switched sides as contenders tweaked their rosters.

And why not? All but four National League teams began the day within 5 1/2 games of a play-off spot. The American League is more spread out — division leaders Boston, Cleveland and Houston have been busy.

Manny Machado, Cole Hamels, Zach Britton, Mike Moustakas and Ian Kinsler were among the big names that moved earlier this month.

Bryce Harper, Jacob deGrom, J.T. Realmuto and McCutchen had been mentioned in trade speculation, but stayed put.

"I think whenever you hear your name or see your name on stuff, you always wonder. But I think that's just the business side of the game," Harper said. "It's part of the game."

One of Harper's teammates packed up.

Exactly a year after getting traded from Minnesota to Washington, reliever Brandon Kintzler was part of another deadline deal. This time, the Nationals sent him to the NL Central-leading Chicago Cubs.

"I thought they were joking. I figured it's not April's Fools. They called me in, I said, 'Am I traded?' They said yeah," Kintzler said.

An All-Star last year, Kintzler turns 34 on Wednesday.

"Birthday again tomorrow, so I'm traveling on my birthday again, so that's great. It is what it is," he said.

Dozier had been a fixture in Minnesota's lineup for years. But the Twins dipped this season, and they sent the power-hitting second baseman to the NL West-leading Los Angeles Dodgers for infielder Logan Forsythe and two minor leaguers.

Rather than starting at Target Field in Minneapolis, the 31-year-old Dozier hustled to join his new club as it hosted Milwaukee. He's now part of a revamped infield for the defending NL West champion Dodgers, who added Machado two weeks ago.

"Brian's brand here in Minnesota, I don't know if you can get much better than that," Twins manager Paul Molitor said. "Everything that he's done for the community and the way that he's played the game, he's set a great example for our young guys throughout, and you're going to miss a guy like that."

The New York Mets had discussions about their talent-rich young pitchers, who include deGrom, Noah Syndergaard and Zack Wheeler.

"We were not going to move those players unless it involved considerable talent coming back in our direction," assistant general manager John Ricco said.

Diekman definitely was on the go.

The 31-year-old lefty struck out two while pitching for Texas on Monday night in a win at Arizona. The Diamondbacks reacquired reliever Brad Ziegler from Miami early Tuesday, then boosted their bullpen by getting Diekman from the Rangers.

Wanting to make Diekman's move easy, the Diamondbacks offered the services of the bullpen cart used to ferry relievers into the game.

"They asked and I was like, 'Yeah, I don't want to carry all of my stuff,'" Diekman said.

Carranza takes lead at Senior Oregon Open

PENDLETON — Joe Carranza took a Day 1 lead at Wildhorse Resort on Tuesday, shooting eight under par as he began work on his second win at the Senior Oregon Open Invitational.

Carranza, a professional from the Aldarra Golf Club in Falls City, Washington, and the 2016 winner of the Senior Oregon Open, made seven birdies, an eagle and a bogey during the round.

Scott Krieger, a professional from Broadmoor GC in Portland, and Tom Brandes, an amateur from Glendale CC in Bellevue, Washington, ended the day two strokes behind Carranza. In the team competition, professional George Mack Jr., Casey Garland, Bob Harrington and Steve Tinney shot 119 in the first round, good enough for 25 under par. The team competition is a two-day event.

The second round of the 54-hole tournament is on Wednesday and the final round is Thursday.

The Senior Oregon Open was founded in 1996 and has been at Wildhorse for 16 years. It is one of three major senior championships in the Pacific Northwest Section and draws some of the top players aged 50 and older.

Saddle Bronc rider Joaquin Real of Santa Paula, Calif., gets an airborne dismount at the end of his 8 second ride Friday aboard Alabama Hannah. Real scored only 35 points on this ride because the mare stopped just out of the chute before bucking across the arena. His re-ride netted Real 75 points, good for third in the go-round.
