Umatilla boaters rescued after capsizing in the river

The captain and crew of a barge rescued two Umatilla residents, after their small boat capsized on the Columbia River.

Around 6 p.m. Tuesday, the U.S. Coast Guard called the Morrow County Sheriff's Office to tell them two people had been spotted in the water west of McNary Dam, clinging to a small overturned boat. The Coast Guard advised that a Tidewater tugboat called the "Ryan Point" was headed downstream from Pasco to Longview, and was headed toward the boaters. The crew of the tugboat picked up the two boaters, Derek Ness, 38, and Dawn Merrell, 47.

Both boaters were hypothermic and weak from the cold water. One of their temperatures was so low it didn't register on a thermometer.

According to a Morrow County Sheriff's Office press release, water conditions were rough, and no other boaters were around. Ness and Merrell had been in the water for three hours before the Ryan Point reached them. Another tugboat had passed the boaters about 30 minutes before, but did not see them in the water.

Morrow County Marine Deputy Mike Cahill was dispatched to handle the incident, and was in touch with the Ryan Point's captain, Josh Burrows. Burrows determined that due to the rough water, it would be best to treat the two on board instead of trying to transfer them in open water. The crew helped them recover until they reached the Boardman Tidewater facility. There, they were met by Boardman ambulance and fire personnel. Deck mechanics transferred the small boat back to shore and onto a trailer.

The sheriff's department is still investigating the incident, inspecting the boat for seaworthiness, and seeing if the boaters had all safety items required when they launched from Umatilla.

Sheriff's team rescues injured woman near resort

WESTON — The Umatilla County Sheriff's Office Search and Rescue team saved an injured woman Saturday near the Bar M Ranch.

The sheriff's office reported the 36-year-old woman was attending a retreat at the resort ranch in the Blue Mountains when she fell and injured her ankle while hiking down a steep trail on the mountainside.

Staff from the ranch tried to use crutches to get her out but were unsuccessful due to the narrowness of the trail and severity of the injury, according to the sheriff's office. The Umatilla Tribal Ambulance responded and treated her injuries, but the ambulance crew had no means of bringing her up the mountain.

The sheriff's search and rescue team responded to the call for help and arrived at the ranch at 6:25 p.m. Team members carried a portable stretcher and wheeled rescue device about 3/4 of a mile to the woman's location. The hike took about half an hour, and she was about 400 feet above the Umatilla River.

"The trail was narrow and steep and contained several areas with steep drop offs at the trail's edge," the sheriff's office reported.

Team members strapped her into the stretcher and used a series of safety lines to ensure a controlled descent and prevent her from going over the side.

Rescuers and the ambulance crew proceeded down the trail with the victim in what became strenuous walk lasting more than two hours. Once down, they transferred her to an all-terrain vehicle and eventually drove her to the emergency department of a local hospital.

Eugene man shot by police files federal lawsuit

EUGENE (AP) — A Eugene man shot by police and later convicted of a crime for raising a gun toward an officer during the incident has filed a federal lawsuit against the city of Eugene, a police dispatcher and two officers.

The Register-Guard reports that Edgar T. Rodriguez, 29, seeks unspecified monetary damages in the lawsuit, filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Eugene.

The suit alleges police violated Rodriguez's rights by using excessive force against him. It also asserts claims of negligence, battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Rodriguez was shot Sept. 10, 2016, after he called 911 to report that a male visitor was acting "insane" and fighting with a woman inside his apartment.

Eugene police spokeswoman Melinda McLaughlin said "the city intends to vigorously defend its employees."
