Exhibit documents Oregon’s ever-changing landscape

Display described as ‘visually stunning’

By TAMMY MALGESINI
East Oregonian

A pair of Oregon photographers explore the Pacific Northwest’s landscape in the current exhibition at the Betty Feves Memorial Gallery.

Both award-winning artists, Kate Ampersand and Katie Newton use vastly different photographic processes in their work. Also, each took separate paths to hone their skills.

While she has taken continuing education classes at Portland Community College and Clark College in Vancouver, Washington, Ampersand is mostly a self-taught shutterbug. Newton possesses a bachelor of fine arts in photography from the University of Oregon.

Also, unlike most current photographers, Ampersand said she doesn’t “do Photo-shop,” preferring instead to capture “real life moments as they actually exist, in-camera.” And, Newton utilizes lumen printing, which features direct contact between the subject matter and photographic paper.

The images in “Vanishing Nature” offer a “visually stunning and thought-provoking” display, said a press release from the gallery. The exhibit is available for viewing Monday through Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and by appointment. The gallery is located in Pioneer Hall at Blue Mountain Community College, 2411 N.W. Carden Ave., Pendleton.

Vancouver Island, British Columbia. After Greenwood Resources announced it was selling its Boardman tree farm, she made several visits to the site to take photographs before most of the trees were removed. Through the different seasons, Ampersand captured the ever-changing colors, lines, shapes and textures among the poplar trees.

Newton, who currently resides in Redmond, said her artwork focuses on mankind’s relationship with nature — ever evolving and changing.

In her “Nature’s Afterimage” series, Newton explores the constantly changing landscapes from the wind, tides and storms along the Oregon coast. Focusing on documenting microcosms of nature, she captured images of organic materials that fell onto the photographic paper.

“The resulting prints are the remaining artifacts of nature constructing its own composition,” Newton said.

“Vanishing Nature” runs through Thursday, Nov. 29. For more information, call 541-278-5952 or visit www.bluecc.edu/community/feves-art-gallery. For the artist’s websites, go to www.ampersandplanet.com and www.ktnewton.com.
