PUBLIC SAFETY LOG

WEDNESDAY

8:53 a.m. — A caller on Norma Drive, Hermiston, asked police to check the area for a shorter male in a black jacket and blue jeans who went door-to-door in a gray Honda-type car and dug through trash cans. The caller said this was the fourth time she saw him doing this.

12:17 p.m. — A caller reported the violation of a restraining order on Minnehaha Road, Hermiston.

12:59 p.m. — Oregon State Police trooper Tyler Steele stopped a Subaru Legacy for equipment violations at Rieth Road and Northwest Pioneer Place, which leads to the nearby Umatilla County Sheriff's Office and jail. The passenger of the car, a 58-year-old Pendleton man, has felony convictions, according to state police, and Steele found guns in the car. State police referred the case to the Umatilla County District Attorney's Office to consider charging the passenger with felon in possession of a firearm.

1:55 p.m. — A Hermiston resident told police her ex-girlfriend sent her harassing messages related to a pending child custody and support case.

3:02 p.m. — A caller told Stanfield police she is concerned with the black-and-white miniature mare in a pasture on East Coe Avenue. The caller said she believes the mare is pregnant with twins and should be under constant supervision until she foals. The caller also reported she asked a local vet to check on the mare at her expense.

ARRESTS, CITATIONS

•Stanfield police arrested Nicholas Geraldo Guerra, 27, of Hermiston, for heroin possession and violating post-prison

•Umatilla Tribal Police arrested Robinson Wilkins Minthorn, 34, of Pendleton, for domestic abuse, felony assault, abuse of an elder and failure to appear.

OBITUARIES

Donna Cornell Casper Muldoon

Vancouver, Wash. August 2, 1937 — December 30, 2019

Muldoon

Muldoon died December 30, 2018, at the age of 81 in Vancouver, Washington. She was surrounded by her family and loved ones. She lost her battle with Lung cancer after almost three years. In those years she had immeasurable optimism, courage and hope.

Donna born August 2, 1937, in Yakima, Washington, and considered Umatilla her hometown. She was born to John and Annie Muldoon. She was the fifth of seven children. Sadly, Donna is preceded in death by sisters Billie, Jean and Harriet and brothers Edward and John. She is survived by her sister and best friend Leona Maddock.

Donna met James Casper in 1952 and they married in 1956. They were proud parents of two sons, Timothy and Kim. Unfortunately, Kim and Tim preceded them in death. Kim had twins, a girl and a boy, McKenzie and Taylor. Tim had one daughter, April. The grandchildren were Donna's pride and joy. They never lived apart from her and she was always part of everything they did. She meant the world to her grandchildren and brought a deep and unconditional love to their lives. Donna also had three great-grandchildren, one on the way! April's children Kimber, Kindrick and Easton shared treasured and very special relationships with her and were able to spend many years creating memories. Before her passing she was able to know that she had a fourth great-grandchild on the way from McKenzie and her husband Brandon. She was able to see her via ultrasound, which was so special to her. Jim and Donna spent most of their lives developing properties for apartments and commercial buildings. They were also in the rental business for many years. Donna stayed busy for all of those years keeping track of all the secretarial and financial work. They made an amazing team for over 62 years of hard work and unmatched work

Something that meant so much to both Jim and Donna was giving back. They had several places that they gave significant charitable donations to in their lives: Meadowood Speech Camp, Shriners Children's Hospital, Donna Cornell Casper St. Jude's, and also building homes and a health care center in the Dominican Republic for an organization that their dear friend Gene is a > part of called Providing Opportunity for Self-Improvement. In the last months of Donna's life, she was able to visit Shriners Hospital and see firsthand what her donation had gone to. In her words, this was one on of her most special moments. The most memorable times, according to conversations with Donna, were of the countless hours on their boat marlin fishing with her son Tim and granddaughter April in Hawaii. She said that in the summers she enjoyed traveling in their motorhomes and spending time with friends. She and Jim spent winters in the desert along with her sister Lee and other treasured friends. She was all about family. She loved anything to do with family and her home was always open to all family and friends. Many referred to Donna and Jim's house as a second home. In her and Jim's life, they opened their home to their daughters-inlaw, nieces, nephews, sisters and all extended family and friends. This meant so much to Donna and she treasured all of those relationships. Grandma said that she got the most enjoyment spending time with her grandchildren. They loved traveling to California and going on many "grandma vacations" along with her sister Lee and her grandchildren. One activity that Donna had so much fun doing was taking trips to the casino. She seemed to always be the one to hit the biggest jackpots. Bargain shopping with family was also a favorite pastime.

Donna had a sense of humor that was unmatched. She kept us laughing up until the last few hours of her life. The last word spoken from her were "I love you." Her strength and will to live is an inspiration to all that had the gift of knowing her. As Donna told her loved ones often, "I love you to the moon and back again."

A celebration of life will be held on Saturday, January 26, at 12:30 p.m., followed by a reception, at Evergreen Memorial Gardens, 1101 N.W. 112th Avenue, Vancouver, WA 98684 (360-892-6060).

Evergreen Memorial Gardens is in charge of arrangements.

Activist from lunch counter protest dies at 84

JACKSON, Miss. — A community organizer shown in an iconic photograph while challenging racial segregation at a Mississippi lunch counter in the 1960s has died at his home in Pocatello, Idaho.

Known by his birth name John Salter Jr. when he worked at historically black Tougaloo College in Mississippi, he later changed his name to John Hunter Gray to honor the Native American part of his ancestry. He sometimes went by the nickname Hunter Bear Gray.

Relatives say he was 84 when he died Monday after an illness. Salter was a sociology teacher and NAACP youth adviser in Mississippi in the early 1960s, working closely with Mississippi NAAČP leader Medgar Evers.

In May 1963, Salter joined black and white Tougaloo students during a sit-in at a segregated lunch counter at the Woolworth's store in downtown Jackson. A mob of young white people doused them with sugar, mustard and ketchup and attacked Salter with brass knuckles and broken glass.

The taunting crowd and the peaceful protesters were captured in a blackand-white photograph that gained international attention.

"I was burned with cigarettes, hit and had pepper thrown in my eyes," Salter, by then known as Gray, wrote in an article published in The Guardian in 2015. "The women weren't struck, but had their hair pulled. All the while the air was filled with obscenities, the n-word — it was a lavish display of unbridled hatred."

The two young women in the photo with Salter were an African-American student named Anne Moody, who later wrote a memoir called "Coming of Age in Mississippi," and who died in 2015; and a white Tougaloo student named Joan Trumpauer, who is now named Joan Trumpauer Mulholland and lives in Alexandria, Virginia. She told The Associated Press on Wednesday that Salter taught young people they could take action to challenge injustice.

"I think he inspired a lot of students to realize what we could do to make the world better," Mulholland

Like many civil rights activists in the 1960s, Salter was monitored by people working for the Mississippi Sovereignty Commission, a state-funded spy agency that sought to preserve segregation. Mulholland was also watched by the commission.

"It was an absolute given," she said.

Salter grew up in Arizona and worked as a labor union organizer in the U.S. Southwest before moving to Mississippi, said one of his sons, John Salter of Lincoln, Nebraska.

After working in Mississippi, the elder Salter worked on voting rights in North Carolina, taught in Iowa, did human rights work for Native Americans in New York and Chicago and taught American Indian studies in North Dakota.

"He never considered himself a career professor," his son said Thursday. "His real love was the stuff he did outside the classroom."

John Salter said his father lived by a favorite phrase from the Industrial Workers of the World labor union: "An injury to one is an injury to all."

Michael O'Brien interviewed John Salter Jr. for his book "We Shall Not Be Moved: The Jackson Woolworth's Sit-In and the Movement It Inspired." "John was a true 'radical' in the very best sense of that word," O'Brien said in a statement Thursday. "He was a fierce advocate for those without a voice. or perhaps better stated, for those who had not yet discovered their voice. ... John's charismatic blend of political activism and can-do philosophy empowered thousands to begin advocating for their rights and their freedoms.

"In my mind, he was a 'great soul' who felt deeply the suffering of others and who turned that empathy into action," O'Brien said.

Gray is survived by two sons and two daughters. His wife of more than 50 years, Eldri Salter, died in 2015. A memorial service will be organized later.
