A Nani-gram of hope: Orlando City takes on Atlanta United

By Ryan Guebert
TV Media

The defending MLS Cup champion Atlanta United is set to host the Orlando City Lions on Sunday, May 12, at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta, Ga. Tune in to Fox for live coverage of the match and get a first-hand look at the significant changes the clubs have made to their rosters from last season.

The retirement of Kaká was a bitter-sweet moment in Orlando City’s history. The team was able to celebrate the career of one of the game’s top-class players, but it also faced uncertainty in the seasons that followed after losing the best player the franchise had ever seen. The 2018 season proved how vital Kaká was for Orlando in the previous three seasons, and the club finished 22nd overall (second from the bottom of the table). This season looked just as bleak for the Lions when the club announced the departures of manager Niki Budalic and captain Jonathan Spector.

A glimmer of hope was introduced with the signing of Portugal international and former Manchester United star Nani, who signed with Orlando in February. Nani brings a plethora of experience to Orlando, having won the Premier League four times with Manchester United under manager Sir Alex Ferguson and won Euro 2016 with Portugal. The 32-year-old winger has had an immediate impact in his debut MLS season. He’s scored four goals and assisted on a Dom Dwyer goal in his first eight games as a Lion.

Miguel Almirón’s departure from Atlanta United to Newcastle United of the English Premier League could have similar effects as Kaká’s had in Orlando. Almirón spent two seasons with Atlanta and helped the club win the MLS Cup last season for the first time in franchise history. The club managed to hold on to all-star striker Josef Martínez, but it has struggled to provide him with the support that Almirón offered, and as a result, the team finds itself in the bottom half of the standings.
