

OUT OF THE VAULT War effort aided by young metal collectors

The year: May 1942. The program: scrap metal collection for the war effort. The major players: Bobby and Dick Newman of Umatilla County.

Many tons of scrap iron were collected and shipped from Umatilla County in the 1940s as part of the war effort to supply metals for the manufacture of munitions and other materials. The most precious ton and a half of metal donated to the effort, however, was collected by two brothers from ranchlands in the middle Cold Springs area between Hermiston and Pendleton.

On early May of 1942, J.L. Dunham drove into Pendleton with a load of 3,000 pounds of scrap iron on his truck, accompanied by nephew, 6-year-old Bobby Newman. The youngster, assisted by his 4-year-old brother Dick, had spent two months locating and hauling scrap iron from ditches and gullies on their uncle's farm.

The boys would locate a piece of iron, long abandoned, and then transport it in their wagon to Mr. Dunham's ranch house. And since some of the pieces of iron were rather large — at least for boys their age — the ton and a half of metal represented a huge investment of work and sweat.

An East Oregonian reporter was on hand at Joe Luck's place in Pendleton when Dunham and Newman were helping unload the truck, and found Bobby in a willing, but modest, mood. He happily posed for a photo with some of the scrap he helped collect, but was disappointed that his brother, who couldn't come to town, wasn't in the photo.

"Did you help them?" the reporter asked Dunham.

"Not a bit of it," Dunham replied. "Those kids did it all themselves."

How could the Axis hope to beat that kind of spirit?

Tribal leaders flexed their newfound political muscle Wednesday evening when they gathered together for the groundbreaking of a new gaming facility. All are betting on a prosperous future that breaks away from federal financial support and brings Indian employees and entrepreneurs into the marketplace. "This is a signal of deep change," said Antone Minthorn, chairman of the general council for the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation. "Things will not be the same any more." Minthorn was one of eight speakers to usher in the Wildhorse Gaming Resort, an event which drew more than 200 people beneath a large tent to listen. Tribal leaders, shovels in hand, dug up the soil where a new casino will be built next November.
