

Ngata retires as a Raven; Billick also honored

By DAVID GINSBURG

OWINGS MILLS, Md. — On a day designed to honor Haloti Ngata's retirement as a member of the Ravens, his former coach in Baltimore stole a portion of the limelight.

Ravens owner Steve Bisciotti welcomed both Ngata and Brian Billick into the team's prestigious Ring of Honor, announcing Wednesday that Billick will be inducted in 2019 and Ngata in 2020.

Ngata was drafted out of Oregon as the 12th overall pick in 2006. The first NFL coach he played for was Billick, who guided the Ravens from 1999-2007 and hoisted the Super Bowl trophy after the 2000 season.

Billick compiled a 80-64 record but was fired by Bisciotti after Baltimore staggered to a 5-11 finish in 2007. It took 12 years, but Bisciotti figured the time was right to finally recognize the 65-year-old Billick for his contribution to the franchise.

"I told Brian how honored we would be, and how lucky we are as an organization, to have had him here," Bisciotti said.

Ngata, 35, will also have his name emblazoned on the Ravens' home stadium, a suitable salute to a five-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle who made a name for himself on a defense that included future Hall of Fame entrants Ray Lewis and Ed Reed.

As a star-struck rookie, Ngata recalled with a chuckle his first encounter with Lewis at training camp.

"Ray said, 'I called you, you didn't answer, what's up?' I froze, I didn't know what to say, you know, when you meet your heroes," Ngata said. "I just told him, 'I'm so sorry, Mr. Lewis, I'll call you next time.'"

Lewis informed Ngata that he could call him Ray.

Ngata and Lewis teamed with Reed and others to win the Super Bowl in 2012. After the 2014 season, Ngata and then-general manager Ozzie Newsome became embroiled in a salary dispute, a prelude to a trade that sent the 320-pound lineman to the Detroit Lions.

"At first I was kind of shocked a little bit," Ngata said. "But I understood. I was against the salary cap. I wasn't moving and they weren't budging."

Ngata toiled three seasons in relative anonymity in Detroit before closing out his 13-year career in Philadelphia in 2018.

"The last month of the season I woke up and thought, 'Why am I still doing this?'" he said. "Once I'm questioning why I'm playing football, I know it's time to retire."

It was important to Ngata that his NFL career would end where he started it.

Wiping away tears, Ngata told an audience of family, friends, former teammates and fans, "This is an amazing organization. I loved being a Raven. I always knew I wanted to retire as a Raven. I just couldn't wait to come back."

Ngata was twice an All-Pro. He had 32½ sacks, five interceptions and seven forced fumbles over 180 games.

Being in Ravens Ring of Honor is special, but there might be something even better in store for Ngata, according to Newsome.

Newsome, who drafted Lewis and Reed, is also a member of the Hall of Fame. He believes Ngata deserves to be honored in similar fashion.

"When I think about a Hall of Famer, No. 1, did he play on a winning ball club? He did," Newsome said. "Was he part of a Super Bowl? He did. Was he a dominant player in his era at his position? He did. So, he's checked all of those boxes."

Stanford men beat Texas to take home the NCAA golf title

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Stanford wanted to be among the eight teams that qualified for match play in the NCAA Championship, knowing anything could happen from there.

It led to an NCAA title, and a perfect ending to the college careers of Brandon Wu and Isaiah Salinda.

Wu and Salinda capped off 3-0 records in match play, and Henry Shrimp delivered the winning point on Wednesday as Stanford beat Texas 3-2 to claim its ninth NCAA title and first since 2007.

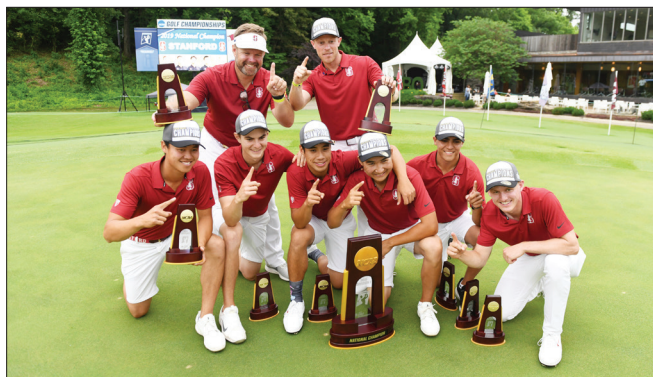

"It's crazy," Wu said. "You can't script a better ending to your career. This whole week, we knew that every round could be our last, so to end on a high note is great."

It capped 24 hours the Cardinal won't forget.

Because of storms in the forecast, the championship match was moved up to the morning. Stanford finished off a 3-2 victory over Wake Forest early Tuesday, and then squeaked by Vanderbilt in the afternoon. After a quick turnaround, Stanford had the upper hand on the Longhorns, especially on the back nine at Blessings Golf Club.

holes to start the back nine for a 4-and-3 victory over

Cole Hammer, the freshman of the year. Behind him, Wu never trailed in a 4-and-3 victory over Pierceson Coody.

Shrimp fell 2 down early in the lead match to Spencer Soosman before tying the match on No. 8. He took his first lead on the 11th hole and never trailed the rest of the way in a 2-and-1 victory that sealed it for Stanford.

Texas won the other two matches behind Parker Coody and Steven Chervony.

"The first goal was to make match play," Salinda said. "Once we made match play, I thought we could win it. It's pretty cool. It means a lot to end our careers like that. This is the best way to end our four years here."

It was Chervony who gave Texas a chance. He won in 19 holes in the decisive match Tuesday evening to beat Oklahoma State, which had the No. 1 seed by leading 72 holes of stroke play by 31 shots.

In the quarterfinals, Texas won the last match on the 18th hole to beat Oklahoma.

"We were ready to play today," Texas coach Jon Fields said. "We just got beat by a really good golf team. That's all there is to it. It will fire us up for next year."
