DRIVING SAFETY | ON THE HIGHWAY

Staying Safe Around Big Trucks

If you've ever been next to an 18-wheeler on a busy interstate with no ways of passing or changing lanes, you've likely felt uneasy.

Tire blowouts or abrupt swerving on a windy day can put you in danger. The key to defensive driving around semis and other big trucks is awareness. As long as you're paying attention to your surroundings, you should be able to make quick decisions to keep you and your passengers safe.

THE NUMBERS

The Bureau of Transportation Statistics reports that the total number of freight transportation related fatalities declined by 23.8 percent from 2000 to 2015. These reports are due in large part to the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration enacting better processes to increase commercial motor vehicle safety.

STAY OUT OF BLIND SPOTS

Truckers may not have complete line of sight on your vehicle, especially if you drive in their blind spots. These tough-to-see areas for a trucker vary somewhat from truck to truck, but common blind spots are on both sides of the vehicle, as well as at the front and back. You should avoid these spots, especially when a truck is turning, backing up or changing lanes.

MAKE QUICK DECISIONS; DON'T LINGER

Speaking of blind spots, never linger next to a truck when passing it. Signal and pass quickly to keep safely out of locations truckers may not be able to see you.

Never drive too closely behind a truck. Doing so can lead to a dangerous situation, especially if you fail to stop in time or are hit from behind.

This could slam your vehicle into the back of the truck. If you're driving a small vehicle, you could even slide under the semi.

GIVE THEM SPACE

Along the same lines, give big trucks plenty of room to brake. Compared to a 3,000-to 4,000-pound car, a tractor trailer can legally weigh as much as 80,000 pounds. A fully loaded truck traveling 65 miles per hour will take almost the length of two football fields to stop in ideal conditions, according to the Utah Department of Transportation.
