against Chile on Sunday in Paris, winning 3-0 with more muted celebrations, including a golf clap from Carli Lloyd, who scored a pair of goals in that game.

Ellis made seven lineup changes for the game against Chile but for Sweden she went back to a lineup similar to the one she used in the opener. Lloyd, who played every minute of the 2015 World Cup and scored three goals in a 5-2 victory over Japan in the title match, came in off the bench to start the second half.

She replaced Alex Morgan, who was involved in a couple of collisions in the first half and at one point held her right knee.

A hip contusion kept defensive midfielder Julie Ertz out of the game after she started in the first two and scored her first World Cup goal against Chile.

"Alex took a knock in the first half and it was just, 'Let's be smart about this.' Similar vein to Julie. It is a zero risk game in terms of having players available for the next round," Ellis said.

Ninth-ranked Sweden, which opened with a 2-0 victory over Chile and followed with a 5-1 win over Thailand, made seven lineup changes for the game against their rivals.

Coach Peter Gerhardsson said he selected his starters with an eye toward the next game.

"We know that we have a new match on Monday, which is a knockout match, and that's the one that's the most important one," he said.

The victory gives the top-ranked United States a potentially more challenging path to the final. If the team can get by Spain, that could set up a quarterfinal clash against No. 4 France in front kick from Megan Rapinoe that bounced twice past two defenders and deflected off Samantha Mewis just 2:40 into the game. It was Horan's second goal in France and the earliest goal of the tournament so far.

American goalkeeper Alyssa Naehner didn't face her first challenge until the 21st minute, when she stopped a shot from Kosovare Asllani.

Tobin Heath dribbled in front of Andersson then blasted an angled shot in the 50th minute from eight yards out that went over goalkeeper Hedvig Lindahl at the near post. The goal was reviewed by VAR after it appeared Lloyd was off-side. It was later determined to have come off Andersson for an own goal.

Lloyd was denied by Lindahl in the 90th minute, stopping her World Cup-record scoring streak at six games.

While U.S. fans dominated the crowds at the team's first two games in France, there were nearly as many Sweden supporters at the Stade Océane.

Draft: Pelicans take Zion

while averaging 24.5 points.

"I have some big shoes to fill in Mike Conley," Morant said. "He's a great player. I wish him the best. Like I said before, it just means the Grizzlies see a lot in me."

RJ Barrett then made it two Duke freshmen within the top-three picks when the New York Knicks took the guard who actually edged out Williamson to lead the Atlantic Coast Conference in scoring. Knicks fans hoped they would get Williamson after finishing with the worst record in the league but seemed happy to end up with Barrett, loudly cheering and chanting "RJ! RJ!" when the pick was announced.

"That was great," Barrett said. "I'm glad that the city wants me here as much as I want to be here."

DeAndre Hunter of national champion Virginia was taken fourth but won't be teaming up with Williamson. The Pelicans acquired the rights to the pick in the Davis deal but agreed to trade it shortly before the draft to Atlanta. The original trade can't be official until July 6, so Hunter was outfitted with a Lakers hit and the draft board behind the stage listed the pick as belonging to the Lakers.

The Cleveland Cavaliers then took Vanderbilt guard Darius Garland, who played in just five games because of a knee injury.

Then it was another pick who won't be playing for the team that made it, with Jarrett Culver taken at No. 6 by Phoenix with a pick that the Suns agreed to trade to Minnesota for the No. 11 pick.

That turned out to be Cameron Johnson, the second North Carolina player to be drafted after Chicago took Coby White at No. 7.

Kentucky then had two straight picks, with PJ Washington going 12th to Charlotte and Tyler Herro 13th to Miami.

Duke did even better by placing three in the top 10. Cam Reddish went 10th to the Hawks, making the Blue Devils the only team to pull off that feat since Florida placed Al Horford third, Corey Brewer seventh and Joakim Noah ninth after winning the 2007 national championship.

Pendleton all-comers track and field schedules follow-up meets

East Oregonian

PENDLETON — Looking to get back on the track? The Rising Phoenix Track Club is here to help.

The organization, along with the Roundup City Racers and the Pendleton High School track and cross-country teams, is hosting their second of three all-comers summer track and field meets on Friday, June 28 through Saturday, June 29. The series is intended to give local fans and athletes a chance to compete while eliminating travel expenses.

The next event will be held at the Pendleton High School track, and welcomes athletes of all ages. Running events will commence on Friday at 6 p.m. with throwing and jumping competitions to follow on Saturday at 9 a.m. A third meet will run from Friday, July 12 through Saturday, July 13.

In a statement, Rising Phoenix founder and head coach Ben Bradley said more than 35 athletes of all ages, from toddlers to 60 year olds, competed at the last event.

"We really enjoyed the weather, the camaraderie, and the friendly competition at the first meet," Bradley said. "Some older athletes got times and marks in events that they hadn't competed in since high school, and others got a chance to try out completely new events. This is the only event of its kind in our area, and we are excited about the number of participants."

Among the top athletes of the first event was the Buckaroos' own Lane Maher, who finished the boys 110 meter high hurdles in 15.41 seconds for first place. Pendleton's James Thatcher, 15, placed third in the 200 meter dash at 26.97.

Pendleton's Drew Reyburn, 15, took home a pair of first-place wins in the field events with his men's triple jump distance of 36 feet, 8 inches and his long jump finish of 16 feet, 6.5 inches. Pendleton's Kendall Bonzani, 16, finished first in the girls triple jump, leaping 28 feet, 1.5 inches.

Volunteers are needed to help time races, rake puts, and measure jumps and throws. Competitors and volunteers can find registration information at <https://risingphoenixtc.com>. For direct questions, email coach Bradley at coachbenbradley@gmail.com.

MLB All-Star rosters could be youngest ever

By JAKE SEINER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball and its fans are on the same page — they want to see more of the kids.

With millennial mashers Cody Bellinger and Christian Yelich leading the way, this year's All-Star starting lineups have a chance to be the youngest ever, based on an Associated Press analysis of the latest ballot results released by the league this week.

The AP studied the average age for starting All-Star position players since the first Midsummer Classic in 1933, and this year's group is almost certain to be historic, especially in the National League. The average age of the eight NL ballot leaders is just 25, a full year less than the previous youngest starting lineup, the 2017 American League roster.

When combined with the AL, this year's projected starters average 26.6 years old — 0.2 older than the 2017 squads, which are the youngest ever. If 24-year-old Rays outfielder Austin Meadows edges 32-year-old Astros outfielder Michael Brantley, the average would fall to 26.3.

"For the young guys to represent and be talked about, it's definitely really special to be a part of," Meadows said.

The AP's analysis was based on information pulled from Baseball-Reference.com, using players' ages as of June 30 each year.

As recently as 2012, the average age of All-Stars elected by fans was over 30, but the years since have featured some of the youngest lineups in the game's 86-year history. The reasons for that seem to be far-ranging, including the introduction of interleague play, improved scouting and player development, the popularity and accessibility of advanced statistics among fans, online balloting and social media.

"It's a product of many, many trends intersecting in Major League Baseball going back 50 years," said John Thorn, MLB's official historian.
