Recent Hermiston High grad Case Hiatt recorded a perfect score June 22 at the Oregon State High School Trap Shooting Championships in Hillsboro. The Bulldogs finished second as a team.

finished second at state.

Hamilton is among a group of six that will compete at the second annual national tournament July 11-14 in Mason, Michigan. The Bulldogs finished seventh last year.

Also competing are recent graduates Thomas Mabbott and alternate Trevor Wilson; incoming seniors Kaden Smith and Mitchell Pimentel; and incoming junior Tyson Stocker.

All but Wilson will compete in the team competition, while all six will participate in the individual portion of the event.

"There are 1,000-plus teams in the nation, and 180 qualify for nationals," Smith said. "There will be more than 2,000 kids at nationals."

Despite his perfect score at state, Hiatt is not part of the national contingent.

"He has been part of the program for four years, but he was not one of our top five during the season," Smith said. "It takes consistency to get (to) the top."

Because trap shooting still is a club sport, the Bulldogs are allowed to compete in Oregon. With Hermiston joining the WIAA last year, all school-sanctioned sports are contested in Washington.

As a club program, the team receives support from the Hermiston Gun Club, does fundraisers, applies for grants, and receives some support from the school district.

"We do a few different things to raise money," Smith said. "We apply for grants through the NRA that cover our targets and ammo. The school has stepped up and helped these kids a lot."

Soccer: Morgan scores and Naeher saves minute but video review determined she was offside — and the Americans in the crowd of 53,512 at Stade de Lyon roared.

Another video review went against the United States late in the game when it determined Becky Sauerbrunn had fouled White in the penalty area. England captain Steph Houghton's penalty shot was stopped by a diving Naeher in the 84th minute.

It was the first penalty kick saved by a U.S. goalkeeper in regular time at the World Cup. At the final whistle, the team mobbed Naeher in front of the goal in celebration. Rapinoe gave her a bear hug.

The mild-mannered goalkeeper was asked afterward if it was the biggest save of her life. "Probably up there, yeah," she said smiling.

"It's a special team and everybody fought hard tonight for all 90 minutes. Players on the field, players on the bench, ready to come in and make differences," Naeher said. "Obviously Christen coming in and starting tonight and scoring a great goal was huge for us. And I think it's just a testament to the team."

The Americans have been to the semifinals of all eight World Cups, and they've won the trophy three times, more than any nation.

England went through to the semifinals in 2015 but fell to Japan before beating Germany in the third-place match for the Lionesses' best finish in the tournament.

"No words that I can say tonight wvill make them feel any better," said England coach Phil Neville.

England will play in the third-place match on Saturday in Nice against the loser of the other semifinal. Moments after Tuesday's loss, Neville was already looking ahead — even to next year.

"My first thought was, 'How do we win on Saturday,' and my second thought was, 'How do we win the Olympics?'" he said.

The United States has won 11 straight World Cup matches and is undefeated in its last 16. With the quarterfinal victory in France, the Americans tied Norway's record winning streak set over the 1995 and 1999 tournaments.

The Americans have exuded confidence since arriving in France. After pouncing on Thailand 13-0 in the opener and celebrating each goal in the rout, they beat nemesis Sweden, the team that ousted the United States in the quarterfinals at the 2016 Olympics. And Rapinoe struck a victorious pose in a 2-1 quarterfinal victory over France on Friday night in Paris.

Rapinoe suffered a minor hamstring injury late in the second half against France, which she said she didn't expect would keep her out of the final. Coach Jill Ellis said there was an outside chance that she could have taken a penalty if the match against England had come to that.

England started Carly Telford in goal instead of Karen Bardsley, who was out with a hamstring injury. Bardsley had shut-outs in both of the team's knockout round matches. Telford started in the team's group stage match against Argentina.

England had shut out its last four opponents but the United States attacked early as expected — the Americans have scored within the first 15 minutes of all of their games in France.

Serena moves into the second round at Wimbledon

By HOWARD FENDRICH
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Used to be that players would dread the prospect of facing Serena Williams, especially at Wimbledon.

Nowadays, they seem to be eager to go up against her — not because they think they can beat Williams, mind you, but because, well, she's Serena Williams, and what better way to create a memory for life than to share a court with one of the, if not THE, greatest in the history of tennis.

So that's why Giulia Gatto-Monticone, a 31-year-old qualifier from Italy making her debut at the All England Club, was thrilled when the draw put her up against Williams in the first round Tuesday, and the schedule put them on Centre Court, to boot. So what if Gatto-Monticone fell behind 5-0 in 17 minutes and wound up losing 6-2, 7-5?

"Incredibly happy to play her," Gatto-Monticone said afterward. "Serena is Serena."

The whole day was, she said, "a dream come true," filled with smiles and tears and goose bumps. From the tour of the stadium that she, her coach, her physiotherapist and her physiotherapist's son were given in the morning: "We went through the club members' area. Just a spectacular place. Truly beautiful couches, flowers. We saw the trophies. We saw the entrance to the court,"

Gatto-Monticone said.

To the match itself, which was briefly even in the second set at 5-all, prompting an Italian reporter to ask whether Gatto-Monticone wondered whether maybe she had a chance: "No," came the reply, "I never thought that."

To the handshake after the highlight-worthy 12-stroke exchange that capped the result, including a trade of volleys with both women at the net: "She told me I'm an amazing player. I don't know if she really thought so, but she was so nice. I told her she's the queen of this tournament. I thanked her."

And then came this: Gatto-Monticone asked the 37-year-old Williams if they could pose for a selfie together.

"She was sweet, because I was panicking and I couldn't find my phone," Gatto-Monticone recounted. "She said, 'That's fine. Don't worry. I'll take it with mine and post it on Instagram.' I said, 'Perfect!'"

Consider, too, the attitude of the next woman standing in the way of Williams' bid for an eighth Wimbledon championship and 24th Grand Slam singles trophy overall (which is aside from her hardware in women's doubles and mixed doubles, an event she is entering this week with Andy Murray). That's another qualifier, 18-year-old Kaja Juvan of Slovenia, who was born a little more than a year after Williams won the 1999 U.S. Open.

ccone, relishes the opportunity to meet Williams.

"I'm glad I got the chance to still play with her," Juvan said, "because she's done so much in her career."

This is true, of course. The thing right now for Williams is that she hasn't been able to do much this season, in part because of an injured left knee that was a big reason Tuesday's match was only her 13th of 2019.

Two former Wimbledon winners who have struggled this season, Maria Sharapova and Garbine Muguruza, both lost, as did a pair of major champions elsewhere, Svetlana Kuznetsova and Sam Stosur. Sharapova, who recently returned to the tour after missing five months because of a right shoulder operation, quit while one game from defeat against Pauline Parmentier at 6-4, 7-6 (4), 5-0, blaming what she said was "a tendon in my left forearm flaring up."

Defending champion Angelique Kerber, two-time Wimbledon winner Petra Kvitova and Ash Barty — playing her first match at No. 1 in the rankings — all won in straight sets.

The men's bracket lost its third top-10 seed, though, when No. 5 Dominic Thiem, a two-time French Open runner-up, was eliminated by Sam Querrey of the United States.

Williams' coach said over the weekend that the pain was gone from that knee in recent weeks and so they finally were able to prepare properly for a tournament. The lack of practice time and match play were reasons Williams pointed to after her third-round exit at the French Open.

to bring the score to 10-8.

Blake Swanson reached home on an error at shortstop in the top of the seventh, but Pendleton's rally fell just short as the Cubs survived for the sweep.

"We had to claw our way back," Armstrong said. "We had a good approach at the plate. I'm really proud of the way the kids fought back."

Roberts went 2-for-4, scoring two runs for Pendleton. Sheley also put up a pair of runs. Although Swanson went 2-for-4, he let go of nine runs on 10 hits over the first 2 2/3 innings on the mound. Michael Flores threw 3 1/3 innings of relief and kept Idaho down with five strikeouts.

Pepsi Diamondjaxx

In Yakima, Pendleton's 16U Pepsi Diamondjaxx went 3-1 at the West Valley Tourney over the weekend.

The baseball team started things off with a barn-burning, eighth-inning rally to claim a 4-3 victory over their Yakima hosts.

Both teams suffered four scoreless innings before Yakima came to life and held onto a 3-1 lead that lasted until the top of the seventh.

Karson Lani and Jack

Davis both hit singles, and Gabe Browning walked to fill up the bases. Collin Primus grounded out, but not before scoring Lani. Davis crossed home on Payton Lambert's following single to pull even at 3-3. It was Blane Peal's double to center field in the top of the eighth that scored Kobe Fell and clinched the win.

A four-run third inning was all it took to take down the Kirkland Merchants later that day. Davis and Jack Monkman both posted RBI singles to jumpstart the Diamondjaxx's early advantage.

Peal held off the Merchants with nine strikeouts over 6 2/3 innings on Pendleton's hill, including a no-hitter in the top of the second.

But the momentum wouldn't last as the Diamondjaxx followed with a 13-2 loss to the Northwest Futures on Saturday.

The Vancouver, Wash.-based team put up a nine-run fourth inning from which Pendleton couldn't recover. Trenton Hughes, Casen Reed, Max Bledy, and Cody Wallace all chipped in two runs each to keep Pendleton at a distance.

Pendleton finished the tournament off with a 7-6 win over Ike thanks to Gabe Browning's walk off single.
