Early rounds nearing the end at Wimbledon

By Ryan Guebert

TV Media

The third grand slam tournament of the 2019 ITF season, the Wimbledon Championships, is underway at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club. Novak Djokovic and Angelique Kerber look to defend their titles in the singles competitions from last year. Tune in Sunday, July 7, to catch early-round action on ABC.

After winning the Australian Open in January for the first time since 2016, Djokovic looked like he could make a push for a grand slam (the capture of all four Grand Slam titles in the same year). When he reached the semifinals of the French Open, he was riding a 26-match winning streak and hadn't lost a Grand Slam match in more than a year. However, his streak was broken by Dominic Thiem in a four-hour, five-set match that ran for two days. Djokovic will look to rebound at Wimbledon, where he has a strong and winning record, having captured four titles in five final appearances.

Thiem is enjoying a breakthrough year, having already won a number of ATP titles, including his first Masters 1000 title with a victory over Roger Federer at Indian Wells. At the French Open, Thiem reached the final, where he met Rafael Nadal and was defeated by "The King of Clay" for the second consecutive year. His focus is now on claiming his first Grand Slam title, which seems to be only a matter of time, given his current form. He has two opportunities to do so: with a win at Wimbledon or at the U.S. Open in August.

Early-round action is coming to an end, and players are preparing for the finals. Catch up on the third round of Wimbledon by tuning in to ABC on Sunday, July 7. The action picks back up on Monday at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.
