YOUR HEALTH | COMMON CONDITIONS

Allergies

An allergy is when your immune system attacks something that doesn't bother some other people, such as pollen, mold, pet dander, food, insect stings or bites.

The American Academy of Allergy Asthma & Immunology says about 50 million Americans suffer from some allergy.

SYMPTOMS

Symptoms of allergies include a runny nose, sneezing, itching, redness, rashes, swelling and trouble breathing. Life threatening symptoms include anaphylaxis, a severe reaction characterized by a feeling of warmth, flushing, shortness of breath, throat tightness, vomiting or diarrhea, and a drop in blood pressure that can cause a loss of consciousness and shock.

DIAGNOSIS

Your doctor may send you to a specialist, an allergist or immunologist. Allergies are diagnosed through skin or blood tests combined with a thorough medical history and physical exam. These tests can help you identify triggers to minimize your allergy symptoms.

TREATMENT

Other than avoiding as much as possible the things that make you sick, there are a variety of over-the-counter and prescription medications that can alleviate your allergy symptoms. Always talk to your doctor before starting any medication and be aware that many antihistamines and other medications can make you very drowsy. Make sure to read the labels thoroughly and ask a pharmacist if you're concerned about drug interactions.

IMMUNOTHERAPY

Some allergic conditions may respond well to immunotherapy, a gradual exposure to allergens to train your immune system not to attack certain stimulants. Immunotherapy shots usually are administered one or two times a week for a range of months. Sublingual tablets can also treat allergies for certain types of grass.
