WINE GUIDE | ACCESSORIES

Trends in Tableware

We're all familiar with the regular, run-of-the-mill glass stemware for our wines. But today's table offers lots more options. Keep reading for the latest trends in serving your best bottles.

STEMLESS

Stemless wine glasses have been around for a few years. Easy to store and dishwasher friendly, stemless glasses are a sleek, modern addition to your table. They are also called wine tumblers and are available in the usual shapes. Be aware, though, if you're planning on a fancy vintage, that stemless glasses can actually change the way wine tastes. For some pours, holding the glass by the bowl, like you must do with a stemless glass, transfers your body heat to the wine, making it warmer and changing the taste.

INSULATED

If stemless glasses are for casual wine drinking, insulated cups are for tailgates. The most popular models also are usually stemless, though some plastic stemmed versions are available. Look for a cup that's easy to pick up and hold (no slick finishes) and that has a lid that's comfortable to sip through. These tumblers also can be used for other drinks, such as cocktails or sodas, and make great gifts.

WINE DECANTERS

Decanting a wine just means taking it out of the bottle. Usually made of clear glass, but sometimes cut glass or crystal, wine decanters allow the wine to breathe and sediment to settle. Decanters come in all shapes and sizes, but the newest lines come in sexy swoops and swirls reminiscent of a snake.
