Francsces Irene Bissinger

Pendleton

March 2, 1927 — July 17, 2019

Francsces Irene Bissinger was born March 2, 1927, the daughter of two Danish immigrants, Ingvard and Anna Skoubo. She was raised on the family homestead in Boardman, Oregon, along with her brothers Ed and Ralph. She attended school in Boardman, graduating in 1945 from the "old" Boardman High School.

Francsces, known to her many friends and family members as "Francie" or "Fran," attended Oregon State University, taking music classes to improve her voice. She had most beautiful soprano voice. She was the one you would hear in church so clearly and perfectly above others. This was war time, so she returned home to help with the farm after one year.

When World War II ended she was married to Russel DeMauro. Together, they raised four daughters: Anna, Donna, Billie and Bobbi. Francsces was primarily a stay-at-home mom, which she loved, because she loved her daughters so deeply.

Francsces was thoughtful, caring and kind. She made friends easily, as people could sense that she was such a genuinely good person. She was a strong Christian woman, having never lost that faith.

She was also so very proud of her Danish heritage, and referred to herself as a "stubborn-headed Dane." One of her favorite sayings was "You can always tell a Dane, but you can't tell them much."

And then she would laugh. She loved to garden. It was her sanctuary. She would converse with the birds and admire the butterflies, while hoeing the weeds and cursing the gophers.

Later in life she found love and married Jim Bissinger. A gregarious soul, they lived happily and peacefully together for many years. They loved having fun together, and friends and family still reminisce about their annual Round-Up parties.

Francsces was a long-time member of the Eagles Lodge. In younger years she so enjoyed dancing, dining, and singing karaoke. She was quick to volunteer her time helping with special events and fundraisers. She had a generous heart, and contributed too many charities.

Francsces passed away peacefully from this earth on July 17 at the age of 92. She is survived by her four daughters, five grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren.

A graveside service will be held at Riverview Cemetery in Boardman, Oregon, on Saturday, July 20, 2019, at 10:00 a.m.

Burns Mortuary of Pendleton is in charge of arrangements. Please share your thoughts to family at www.burnsmortuary.com.

Pumpsie Green, 1st black player on Boston Red Sox, dies

By JIMMY GOLEN

Associated Press

BOSTON — Former Boston Red Sox infielder Elijah "Pumpsie" Green, the first black player on the last major league team to field one, has died. He was 85.

The Red Sox said Green, who lived in California most of his life, died Wednesday at in a hospital in San Leandro, near Oakland; no cause of death was immediately available. The team observed a moment of silence before its game against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"Pumpsie Green occupies a special place in our history," Red Sox owner John Henry said. "He was, by his own admission, a reluctant pioneer, but we will always remember him for his grace and perseverance in becoming our first African-American player. He paved the way for the many great Sox players of color who followed. For that, we all owe Pumpsie a debt of gratitude."

A light-hitting second baseman and shortstop, Green brought baseball's segregation era to an end of sorts when he entered a game against the Chicago White Sox as a pinch-runner for Vic Wertz on July 21, 1959 — more than a dozen years after Jackie Robinson broke baseball's color barrier with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Green joined the team on a road trip and had played nine games before taking the field at Fenway Park for the first time. Green said this year in an interview with NESN, the Red Sox TV network, that he remembered receiving a standing ovation when he came to the plate, batting leadoff.

"It was heart-warming and nerve-wracking," he told reporters in 1997, when he returned to Boston to take part in ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of Robinson's debut. "But I got lucky: I hit a triple off the left-center fence."

Born in Boley, Oklahoma, he moved with his family to California at a young age and met his wife Marie Presley at Contra Costa Junior College. He made his professional baseball debut at 19 years old for the Oakland Oaks of the Pacific Coast League and was the California League's Most Valuable Player in 1955.

The Red Sox purchased his contract and he attended his first spring training with the club in 1956. He was added to the club's 40-man roster in September of 1958.

Green didn't have the talent of Hall of Famers like Robinson and Larry Doby, who was the first black player in the American League. The Red Sox infielder reached the majors as a role player, just once playing more than 88 games, and never hitting more than six homers or batting better than .278.

Green played parts of four seasons with the Red Sox before finishing his career with one year on the New York Mets. In all, he batted .246 with 13 homers and 74 RBIs.

But his first appearance in a Boston uniform ended baseball's ugliest chapter, and the fact that it took the Red Sox so long left a stain on the franchise — and a void in the trophy case — it is still trying to erase.
