Patriots take on Steelers in Sunday-night action By Ryan Guebert

TV Media

Breaking from tradition, the reigning Super Bowl champions will not feature in the season's kickoff game, and will instead host the first Sunday night football game of the 2019 NFL season. Tune in Sunday, Sept. 8, when Tom Brady and the New England Patriots kick off their season against the Pittsburgh Steelers, with live coverage on NBC.

At 42 years old, Tom Brady is embarking upon his 20th season in the NFL as the Patriots' starting quarterback. Picked 199th in the 2000 NFL Draft, Brady has had one of the most prolific careers in league history, having won three NFL MVP awards and a record six Super Bowl titles and four Super Bowl MVPs. Brady has accomplished all of this with a different backfield and receiving corps in almost every season. When he threw his 500th touchdown last season, it was to his NFL record 71st different player, Josh Gordon.

Brady and the Patriots are set to begin a post-Rob Gronkowski era. The five-time Pro Bowl tight end announced his retirement in March at the age of 29. In nine seasons with the Patriots, Gronkowski won three Super Bowls and was Brady's most reliable target, catching 76 of his touchdowns (37 more than anyone else). Julian Edelman put on a display in last season's Super Bowl win, receiving 10 catches for 141 yards, which earned him the Super Bowl MVP award, and he should emerge as Brady's most popular target this Despite wanting to play until he's 50 years old, Brady is nearing the end of his illustrious career, and each passing game becomes more sentimental. Don't miss the start of Brady's 20th season as the Patriots kick off the year against the Steelers at Gillette Stadium on Sunday, Sept. 8. Catch live Sunday night football action on NBC.
