DeSean Jackson and the Eagles take on the Packers in Thursday night action

By Ryan Guebert
TV Media

Week 4 of the 2019 NFL regular season kicks off with the Philadelphia Eagles taking on the Green Bay Packers at Lambeau Field. Tune in Thursday, Sept. 26, for Thursday night football with live coverage on Fox.

In a trade during the offseason, DeSean Jackson made his return to Philadelphia. He was first drafted by the Eagles in 2008 and spent six seasons with them before signing with the rival Washington Redskins in 2014, then with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in 2017. While with the Redskins and Buccaneers, Jackson was one of the Eagles' worst nightmares. In seven regular-season games against his former team, he received for 569 yards and three touchdowns, which helped keep Jackson on the winning side of a 6-1 record against the Eagles.

Already in the latter stages of his career, Jackson has shown no signs of slowing down, and, at 32 years of age, the speedy wideout remains one of the top deep-threat receivers, leading the league last season in yards per catch (18.9). He will undoubtedly be one of Carson Wentz's go-to targets this season when looking downfield and needing to make a big play.

The Packers will always remember Jackson for his famous punt return against the New York Giants in 2010, now referred to as the "Miracle at the New Meadowlands." In Week 15 of that year, the divisional game between the Eagles and the Giants was tied 31-31 late in the fourth quarter, and it looked destined for overtime. However, the Giants made the mistake of punting to Jackson with 14 seconds remaining, and he returned to the end zone as time expired and won the game. The play proved to be a decisive moment that helped the Packers clinch a playoff spot and ultimately win Super Bowl XLV.
