

Hall of Fame: Edie a finalist for PRCA Lifetime Achievement award

Round-Up. His first time riding in the Pendleton Round-Up was the mid-1960s. They are the two rodeos each year the couple never misses.

Their daughter Crystal was born in 1967, and the young family lived in a travel trailer following rodeos most of the year. Their daughter Kelly was born in 1973, and Clyde cut his travel to primarily circuit rodeos.

"It was the best life ever," said Crystal, who lives in Hermiston. "I loved it from the beginning. I wouldn't trade it for the world. I grew up around the big names back in the day — my dad's friends' kids were my friends."

With a family to support, and a house payment to make, Clyde started driving truck for Star Motor Freight. He quit riding for a few years, but soon was back on the horses doing what he loved.

He kept his rodeos within the Columbia River Circuit, and reached the finals a few times.

In 1993, Clyde and Edie moved to Hermiston, and Clyde continued with Senior Pro Rodeo, and finished second in the world in 1998.

He had plans for a return in 1999, but it never happened.

While driving to Nampa, Idaho, with a truck load of cattle, he was hit head-on by another semitruck. Clyde was severely injured, cattle were killed, and his truck was totaled.

That was the end of his rodeo career, but not his love of rodeo.

At the Pendleton Round-Up last week (he and Edie have lifetime passes to PRCA rodeos), he was everywhere from behind the bucking chutes to the Let 'er Buck Room. There wasn't a stranger in the midst.

Though he enjoyed many years of competing, he never made the National Finals Rodeo.

"He just missed out," Edie said. "He was 16th one year. One of the secretaries didn't get results sent in. That was kind of depressing."

he likes to golf and take his sailboat out on the river.

Keeping things in check

In addition to raising a family and joining her husband on the road, Edie, 74, began helping rodeo secretaries.

That soon turned into a job — one she has enjoyed for 52 years. One of the first guys she processed for a rodeo was eight-time world champion calf roper Dean Oliver.

Edie came in on the ground floor with the Columbia River Circuit in 1975, and most recently was the circuit treasurer.

"The time, effort and lifetime passion she has for the sport, I wish we had more like her," CRC president Rowdy Barry said. "She is all things rodeo. She knows the rules, the bylaws." Edie also will give Barry a kick in the pants, something he said he needs every now and again.

"Edie is always prodding me to get something done," Barry said. "I appreciate that. She lives and breathes it, and doesn't want the acknowledgement."

And for as much as she keeps things running behind the scenes, she's also like a den mother, if you will, to the cowboys on the circuit.

"She's there when wayward young cowboys need straightening out, but she's also there for an attaboy," Barry said.

To this day, she still oversees rodeos in Kennewick, Washington, Omak, Washington, Lewiston, Sisters, Moses Lake, Washington, Prineville, Central Point, Coulee City, Washington, and Big Fork, Montana.

"We got to do what we wanted to our whole lives," Edie said.

Last month, Edie was named one of the finalists for the PRCA Donita Barnes Lifetime Achievement Award. Clyde proudly offered up the information. She will find out in December if she won.

"It's nice to be recognized," she said.

Edie has helped several people to become rodeo secretaries, including her daughter Crystal. She also has worked for several top livestock contractors over the years, including Flying Five, Big Bend, Corey & Lange and Beard Rodeos, just to name a few.

"My mom had me helping out when I was old enough to be a help and not a hinderance," Crystal said.

When she isn't working, they travel to watch their granddaughter Makayla compete at rodeos, and they make several visits a year to Lewiston to visit family and friends. Makayla will live with her grandparents this year while she attends Blue Mountain Community College and competes on the rodeo team.

Edie makes the annual trek to Las Vegas for the NFR, but Clyde isn't a big fan of all the people, and opts to stay home.

"He has to sit in his seat," Edie said. "He can't wander."

MLB: Mariners top Bucs

Dunn recovers

Mariners manager Scott Servais pegged Dunn to get through five shut-out innings. Matt Magill allowed back-to-back singles to start the ninth before retiring the next three batters for his fifth save.

The Pirates lost a fifth straight game since winning three of four from Sept. 9-12. They have been outscored 57-16 during the losing streak, including 10-1 in the first two games of this series.

Dylan Moore put the Mariners ahead 2-0 with a two-out, two-run double down the left field line in the second inning.

Cole Tucker hit a pinch-hit triple for Pittsburgh before scoring on a ground-out from Kevin Newman, making it 4-1 in the eighth.

Keep it going

Newman extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a single over Mariners shortstop J.P. Crawford in the third inning. He has hit safely in 20 consecutive starts dating back to Aug. 24.
