Nations look to hold Webb Ellis Cup

By Ryan Guebert
TV Media

The International Stadium in Yokohama, Japan, is set for a big week of games and festivities as the 2019 Rugby World Cup wraps up semifinal matches on Sunday, Oct. 27, teeing up the final on Saturday, Nov. 2. Tune in to NBC Sports for live coverage of the games as nations from around the world look to raise the greatest trophy in international rugby.

Famously referred to as the "All Blacks," New Zealand entered the tournament as defending World Cup champion. With an overall record of 452-21-122 (a 77.2 win percentage), the All Blacks' dominance of the sport is nearly as intimidating as the traditional dance (known as a "haka") they perform in front of their opponents before each match. New Zealand won its third World Cup title at the 2015 tournament held in England, where it defeated Australia in the final, 34-17, and lifted the Webb Ellis Cup for the second time in a row.

Only four nations have raised the Webb Ellis Cup since the World Cup's inception in 1987: New Zealand (3), Australia (2), South Africa (2) and England (1). The cup is a 1906 trophy made by Carrington and

Co. of London, inspired by a Victorian design of a 1740s cup by Paul de Lamerie. "The International Rugby Football Board" and "The Webb Ellis Cup" are engraved on the face of the trophy to commemorate the alleged inventor of rugby football, William Webb Ellis.

Find out if New Zealand will get the opportunity to perform a haka at the International Stadium in Yokohama, Japan, and claim the first ever "three-peat" at the Rugby World Cup. Semifinal matches end on Sunday, Oct. 27, with the final match taking place on Saturday, Nov. 2. Tune in to NBC Sports for live coverage of all the games.
