Best Trick-or-Treating Tips

Trick-or-treating can be one of the most fun experiences for children growing up. It can also be potentially dangerous if parents aren't paying attention.

The keys to a safe, memorable and candy-filled night is preparation and vigilance.

Always supervise your young children when they are trick-or-treating. If they are older and more responsible, make sure they are traveling in a large group with an easy way to contact parents.

Read on for other trick-or-treating safety tips and be sure to implement them into your plans this year.

PLAN OUT YOUR NIGHT

Depending on where and when you plan to trick or treat, make sure you're being realistic about your child's experience. Remember that even though your kids have a lot of energy, their bodies aren't able to withstand the same workload as adults.

Keep their little legs in mind when you're mapping out which houses or shopping centers you will be visiting. Knowing where you're going will also help you stay on track and not end up lost in a neighborhood you're not familiar with.

STAY OUT OF THE DARK

One of the most important safety tips for trick-or-treating is to remain visible. Many towns make their trick-or-treating hours during the early evening hours to make sure it's not too dark when children start walking around neighborhoods with their parents.

If it does happen to get dark during your hunt for candy, have some flashlights handy for extra light. If you're riding bicycles around town, be sure to have bright reflectors on your bike spokes. This will help give others a clear visual on where you are.

CHECK THEIR BAGS

When your kids get home to check their loot, be sure to give it a thorough review. Find and throw away any candy that is opened or not in its original wrapper.

If you have younger children, make sure they are not opening and eating candy they could choke on.

Check for any candy that may include allergens, such as peanuts or wheat, to ensure your kids stay safe while enjoying their candy bounty.

And don't forget to take advantage of one of the biggest parenting perks: Being a quality assurance candy taste-tester after the kids go to bed on Halloween night.
