Arsenal and Leicester City seek three points

By Ryan Guebert

TV Media

__ eading into the busy month of December when most clubs have seven matches in four weeks, managing players' minutes is an absolute necessity, especially for clubs looking to secure a top-five position in the league table. Both Arsenal and Leicester City have made solid starts to the 2019-20 Premier League season and are looking to take all three points when they square off on Saturday, Nov. 9, at King Power Stadium. Tune in to NBC for live coverage of the match.

Arsenal's summer signing, Nicolas Pépé, has struggled to find his form as a gunner and, despite being a pacey winger, looks out of sorts in manager Unai Emery's system. There have been glimpses of his brilliance from his time at Lille, but nothing convincing enough to make him a threat against Premier League defenses. Pépé will have the opportunity to put his pace and skill on display against a Leicester City squad that plays a similar style to Arsenal and allows plenty of open space to counterattack.

Despite losing Harry Maguire to Manchester United before the season kicked off, Leicester City manager Brendan Rodgers has been able to form a solid backline, led by Jonny Evans and Ça lar Söyüncü. Leicester City endured a number of managerial changes throughout the 2018-19 season, with Rodgers being hired at the end of February. He was able to take Leicester from 12th to seventh in his first six games, but with a difficult schedule at the end of the season that included matches against Arsenal, Manchester City and Chelsea, the Foxes finished ninth overall. Now with the opportunity to manage an entire season for Leicester, Rodgers has Jamie Vardy scoring at his regular pace and appears to have found James Maddison's true potential in the midfield.

In the past four meetings between these two clubs, there have been no fewer than three goals scored in each match (18 in total). Tune in for what should be a fast-paced match with plenty of goal scoring opportunities. Catch all of the action at King Power Stadium on Saturday, Nov. 9, with live coverage of the match on NBC.
