Community Cleanup

The problem with litter is much more involved than aesthetics.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, mismanaged trash can wind up in the world's rivers and oceans, causing severe damage to the planet and its resources. Illegally dumping debris is known to harm physical habitats, transport toxic chemicals and threaten life throughout river, marine and coastal environments.

Plastic is the most dangerous material to dispose of improperly. As bottles or bags find their way into waterways, marine life and birds fall victim to becoming tangled or ingesting the fatal product.

The organization Ocean Crusaders reports these sobering statistics regarding plastic and our world's oceans.

- There are approximately 5.25 trillion pieces of plastic debris in the ocean, with 269,000 tons floating on the surface
  - About 1 million seabirds die from plastic annually
  - At least two-thirds of the world's fish population suffer from plastic ingestion
  - Scientists have identified 200 dead zones, where living organisms can no longer grow.
- Because the problem is so severe, it's vital to do your part in keeping your community clean and committing to disposing of trash properly.

ORGANIZE A CLEANUP

If you are aware of an area in your neighborhood that is commonly littered, take the initiative to make a stand. Communicate your concerns with local officials and request their permission to organize a task group to clean the location.

Once approved, use social media to reach out to your peers, or post flyers in high-traffic areas. In your post, express your worry about the state of your community and how it impacts the planet.

THINGS YOU NEED

Because types of litter can be harmful to both wildlife and human health, make sure to take precautions before cleaning up. The organization Nationwide Cleanup urges participants to purchase gloves, masks and different color bags to organize recyclables from garbage.

Plan a fun event after the hard work is complete. You should consider organizing a lighthearted sports game or bring a portable grill so lunch can be prepared.

TAKE ACTION

Bring the community's attention to the litter problem. After you have cleaned up an area, attend city council meetings to encourage lawmakers to enforce litter laws or adopt stricter laws. You can recommend that they hang signs declaring littering fees or use surveillance to find and hold people accountable for mismanaging their garbage.
