

DEAR ABBY

Student has trouble getting homework help from mom

Dear Abby: My mom is mad at me. I have been a little bad, but I always do the dishes, sweep, clear the table and take out the trash. Every day when school is finished, I wait for Mom to get off work so she can help me with my homework, but when I do, she gets upset, mad and frustrated and stops talking to me. She tells me to do it myself, but I don't know how to do some. She says I'm smart, but I don't know if I am. Please help me because I want my mom happy. — Stuck Student in North Carolina

Dear Student: Of course you do. When your mother becomes frustrated while trying to assist with your homework, the reason may be she is stressed about something else after a hard day at work, or she doesn't know the solution. Please take that into consideration, because I have no doubt you are smart and want to please her.

When you get stuck, ask your teacher for help if he or she is available. If that isn't workable, another solution to your problem may be as simple as your mom finding someone who can tutor you in areas you are weak in. High school and college students do this (online for now) for extra money. You may also find help online with Khan Academy or other nonprofit educational organizations.

Dear Abby: A couple of our family members habitually come late to gatherings, making the grand entrance. They attended a wedding shower several years ago. They arrived late, ate the food and socialized minimally. Just as the gifts were being opened, the two of them got up, smiled at everyone and walked out. The rest of us were shocked.

Fifteen months later, the two attended a baby shower for the same relative. Again, they arrived late and barely interacted with anyone. When the meal was served, they ate and, just as the presents were about to be opened, they got up and left. Several attendees commented on their rudeness.

How do you deal with relatives who feel this is acceptable behavior? We were brought up to believe that if you attend an event, you stay for the event, rather than eat and run. If you can't stay, don't come.

Older family members are having a hard time accepting their behavior. Are we older folks out of step with today's society? — Hates Rudeness in California

Dear Hates Rudeness: The way to deal with this kind of rudeness is to point out to the offenders that what they are doing is disrespectful. And if it happens after the warning, omit them from the guest list.

Dear Abby: I clipped and saved a quote you published years ago. Given today's challenges, I thought it might be a good time to reprint it: "Things turn out for the best for those who make the best of the way things turn out." — Bob in New Hampshire

Dear Bob: Amen to that. And it applies to so many different situations.

A red bandana handkerchief, carried by Abraham Lincoln in the days when he made campaign speeches, is preserved as an interesting relic by Mrs. Lily Hobe, of this town. The handkerchief, with a picture of the great emancipator, forms a Lincoln's birthday display at Sawtelle's jewelry store. When Lincoln was campaigning, Mrs. Hobe relates, he met her father, Land Zerby, postmaster of an Illinois town. The historical handkerchief was soiled and before the future president mounted the platform exchanged his handkerchief for a clean one of Mr. Zerby's. Mr. Zerby treasured the souvenir and gave it to his daughter.

More guidance counseling — better recreation facilities — summer jobs — sex education. These were just a few of the issues presented to the District 12 Committee on Children and Youth by boys and girls from several high schools in the area. Pendleton students were articulate in their dissatisfaction with the status quo. There is favoritism shown by the teachers, and too much emphasis on sports, they believe. "Why do we have to beg for band uniforms, when even the mouthpieces are bought for football players?" one student observed. There is discrimination against minority races in Pendleton, the students said. The policy on suspensions is unfair. And kids are tired of being bugged about their hair. A need for sex education in the schools was felt strongly by the students: "Too many girls are getting pregnant, and they should be informed on how to avoid it. Abortions cost $600, and not many can afford that. And middle-class girls can't get pills. They'd have to go to their family doctors."

With toothpaste in one hand and a package of Oreos in the other, Jaclyn Lewellyn got down to work. She and other students in Maria Gutoski's English class at Hermiston's Sandstone Middle School worked after school Monday to pack "care packages" for American troops in Bosnia. Their teacher got the names from former Pendleton resident Tana Devine, who has been stationed with her husband Patrick in Germany. In January, Patrick Devine was sent on the peace-keeping mission to Bosnia. In an East Oregonian story Jan. 23, Tana explained that during the missions, it's an unspoken rule that the wives of enlisted men send care packages to the single men in the battalion, as well as to their husbands. But there are 40 single men in Patrick's battery, and Tana said there aren't enough spouses to go around. Tana asked for help, and that's where the students came in. "I never expected this amount of support," said Gutoski.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

On Feb. 13, 2016, Justice Antonin Scalia, the influential conservative and most provocative member of the U.S. Supreme Court, was found dead at a private residence in the Big Bend area of West Texas; he was 79. During a Republican presidential debate that evening in South Carolina, the candidates, with the exception of Jeb Bush, insisted that President Barack Obama should let his successor nominate Scalia's replacement. (Obama nominated Merrick Garland; Senate Republicans refused to advance the nomination, which expired the following January.)

In 1633, Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei arrived in Rome for trial before the Inquisition, accused of defending Copernican theory that the Earth revolved around the sun instead of the other way around. (Galileo was found vehemently suspect of heresy and ended up being sentenced to a form of house arrest.)

In 1861, Abraham Lincoln was officially declared winner of the 1860 presidential election as electors cast their ballots.

In 1935, a jury in Flemington, New Jersey, found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of first-degree murder in the kidnap-slaying of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., the 20-month-old son of Charles and Anne Lindbergh. (Hauptmann was later executed.)

In 1939, Justice Louis D. Brandeis retired from the U.S. Supreme Court. (He was succeeded by William O. Douglas.)

In 1960, France exploded its first atomic bomb in the Sahara Desert.

In 1965, during the Vietnam War, President Lyndon B. Johnson authorized Operation Rolling Thunder, an extended bombing campaign against the North Vietnamese.

In 1974, Nobel Prize-winning Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union.

In 1991, during Operation Desert Storm, allied warplanes destroyed an underground shelter in Baghdad that had been identified as a military command center; Iraqi officials said 500 civilians were killed.

In 1998, Dr. David Satcher was sworn in as the 16th Surgeon General of the United States during an Oval Office ceremony.

In 2000, Charles Schulz's final "Peanuts" strip ran in Sunday newspapers, the day after the cartoonist died in his sleep at his California home at age 77.

In 2013, beginning a long farewell to his flock, a weary Pope Benedict XVI celebrated his final public Mass as pontiff, presiding over Ash Wednesday services inside St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican.
