Terry worked for Les Schwab for 16 years, and finished his career working in the aircraft manufacturing and maintenance industries.

otive and motorcycles. His greatest passion was being outdoors. Terry especially enjoyed spending time at a family cabin in the Blue Mountains riding snow mobiles and four-wheelers. Later in life he found a deep conviction for the Lord.

Richard C. 'Dick' Frazier

Hood River
September 28, 1931 — March 3, 2021

On March 3, 2021, Richard C. "Dick" Frazier, loving husband and father, passed away at the age of 89.

Dick was born on September 28, 1931, in Portland, Oregon, to Wilbur and Bernice (Proctor) Frazier. On July 12, 1951, he married Joyce M. Lyon in Umatilla, Oregon. They initially lived in California where Dick was stationed in the Navy. After completing his tour in the Navy, they moved back to Oregon where they began raising their two daughters, Linda and Brenda, and son Steve.

Frazier

Dick's passion was horses. During WWII, while his dad was away in the Navy, Dick lied about his age so he could race horses professionally. That was followed up by riding rough stock at rodeos throughout the Northwest and working on ranches where horses were a necessity. He shared his passion with his kids and horses were always a part of his life. Even in his last days he enjoyed spending time in his daughter's barn with her horses.

His early ranch days gave away to a job with Pacific Power and Light as a power plant operator, initially starting at a plant at the head of Wallowa Lake, then on to Tygh Valley and finally landing at the Powerdale plant in Square dancing, hunting, fishing and camping were all activities that Dick and Joyce loved. Whether it was on the Imnaha River in Eastern Oregon, Lake Billy Chinook in Central Oregon, or on the Oregon coast they often had their trailer hooked up and were on their way somewhere. After retirement they extended their travels to Arizona during the winter months and continued those activities until Joyce passed away in 2012.

Dick was a storyteller, a tease, and deeply loved by his family and friends. Most of those who knew Dick enjoyed his humor, his compassion, and his caring attitude for those around him. During his last several years after moving into Hawks Ridge Assisted Living, he most enjoyed delivering Meals-On-Wheels to area folks that couldn't get out.

Dick is survived by his five children: Ron and Linda Harder, Brenda Howe, Steve and Chris Frazier; five grandchildren: Ronda, Ryan, Brian, Brandon and Mychal; and 10 great-grandchildren.

The College of Education at Eastern Oregon University has developed a hybrid cohort open to students throughout the region, offering a new path to a bachelor's degree in Elementary Education.

Education program offers hybrid learning

East Oregonian

LA GRANDE — Working educators have a new path to a bachelor's degree in Elementary Education from Eastern Oregon University.

In addition to on-campus and onsite cohorts, the College of Education at EOU has developed a hybrid cohort open to students throughout the region. This format allows students to complete most of their coursework online, and engage in practicum placements without relocating.

Dean of the College of Education Matt Seimears said the idea was born last spring when remote learning tools became prevalent due to the COVID-19 pandemic. That first cohort proved the innovative platforms could deliver high-quality teacher training remotely.

"This will allow students from all over the state and beyond the opportunity to pursue this program," Seimears said. "You get the flexibility of remote education with the stability of in-class instruction."

Students interact with peers from a variety of contexts and locations, expanding discussion and building a professional network along the way. Students who already work in schools as paraprofessionals or in other roles can complete their practicum requirements at their current site and maintain employment while progressing toward a degree. The two-year program prioritizes equity and access, with tailored pathways for transfer students. Undergraduates can qualify for elementary-level endorsements in Multiple Subjects and English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL). Faculty members partner with school districts to provide ongoing support while developing a teacher-to-teacher network.

"The one-on-one guidance our staff and faculty offer students is one-of-a-kind," Advisor Kylie Evans said. "The College of Education programs at EOU are grounded in theory and industry-based experiences."

She said the new hybrid cohort is designed to provide the same initial teacher preparation found on campus in a synchronous, online or hybrid-remote format. Growing interest in the hybrid model led administrators to extend the application deadline from March 1 to April 1.
