Blazers:

looked a step slow and they looked like a rested team," he said. "I don't say that very often."

Nurkic, who was on a minutes restriction against the Heat, picked up two quick fouls and went to the bench with 7:02 left in the first quarter. With about 3:50 left in the opening half, Nurkic left the court, his hand on his lower back. But he returned to start the second half and said after the game that the X-rays were negative.

Derrick Jones Jr.'s 3-pointer put Portland up 29-19 early in the game, but the Heat closed the gap in the second quarter and went into the break with a 56-48 lead. The Heat stretched their advantage to 65-50 early in the third quarter.

Portland got another scare in the third quarter when Kanter went down after knocking heads with another player. But he also returned.

Tip-ins

Heat: It was the first of a four-game road trip. Tyler Herro was listed as questionable for the game because of right foot soreness, but played. KZ Okpala remained out because of health and safety protocols.

Trail Blazers: It was the second of two meetings with the Heat this season. Portland won the first 125-122 in Miami on March 25. ... With a 3-pointer in the third quarter, Lillard passed Dirk Nowitzki on the NBA's career made 3s list.

Frustration

Portland has lost four of its last six games. But the Blazers looked especially out of sorts against the Heat.

"I understand the frustration with the fans and everybody, but sometimes it's frustrating for us too," Nurkic said. "I know the coaches, no matter what they tell us, they can't go out there and change it. I get that, everybody gets that, but at some point, something's got to happen."
