COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Tamkaliks Celebration postponed to 2022

WALLOWA — On April 7, the Tamkaliks Committee convened in Pendleton to deliberate hosting a Tamkaliks Celebration in July. It was decided that the celebration will once again be postponed.

It was not an easy decision, but Nez Perce Wallowa Homeland and the Tamkaliks Committee agree that this is the best decision for the safety of tribal elders and the involved communities.

Just as in 2020, two students will still receive the Taz Conner and Terry Crenshaw Memorial Scholarships of $500 each. Applications are due on May 3 for Wallowa County students and on June 28 for Native students. Application details and the ability to donate to the scholarship fund can be found at www.wallowanezperce.org/resources.

Even though there will be no Tamkaliks this summer, the visitor center will be open all summer and the powwow grounds are open for dispersed camping, with all facilities up and running. Individuals and groups are invited to camp and bring families, horses and drums. Explore the Wallowa Valley, the canyon country and the mountain trails.

It is the wish of the Tamkaliks Committee that song, dance, and prayer resonate from this special place, Tamkaliks Celebration or no. The Tamkaliks Celebration will be held again once it is safe to do so.

Classical music performances scheduled

PORTLAND — A series of classical music performances is scheduled for state parks and other outdoor arenas this summer as "In A Landscape: Classical Music in the Wild" travels the Pacific Northwest.

The concert tour features a 9-foot Steinway grand piano on a flatbed trailer, and music is transmitted to concertgoers via wireless headphones. Participants can wander the landscape to enjoy the natural settings, including state parks, urban greenspaces, working ranches, farms and historical sites while enjoying the performance. Guest artists during past tours have included poets, visual artists, dancers, and musicians playing everything from banjos to pianos.

Local performances of classical music will be offered at Wallowa Lake State Park in Joseph, the Cant Ranch at the John Day Fossil Beds National Monument near Dayville, and Cottonwood Canyon State Park near Wasco. Other performances will be held in Eugene, Central Oregon, the Oregon Coast and more, with additional sites to be announced.

Tickets for In A Landscape members go on sale on April 26 at noon. The general public can purchase tickets beginning at noon on May 5.

Be Part of the Tribute to Service
"Beacon of the Sentinels"

Contribute to the campaign for Pendleton's new tribute to our military and your name, or that of a friend or family member who has served, will be engraved on a brick as part of the Beacon Plaza (just west of the east viaduct), home to the new sculpture.

Pendleton VFW Post 922 and the City of Pendleton's Art Commission engaged artist Michael Clapper to design this 22-foot rising steel beacon, and we're asking you to join in.

Your brick can hold the name, rank and insignia of military members past or present. There are many levels of giving and participation.
