DEAR ABBY

Reader's classic vehicle gets too much attention

JEANNE PHILLIPS ADVICE

Dear Abby: I drive a classic car to work every day. Since I began working there, people often ask me about selling it. Most of the time I take it as a compliment and tell them it is not for sale currently, but the same people often continue to ask. It is starting to get on my nerves. I have even seen people trying to open up the hood to see the engine while I'm off in the distance. I do not have another car or mode of transportation, and I'm starting to get worried. Any advice would be appreciated. — On Edge In Georgia

Dear On Edge: Tell the offenders (again) that your car is not for sale AND you do not want anyone touching it. If it continues to happen, tell your supervisor or your boss that someone trying to get into it "while you're off in the distance" makes you concerned. However, if you're still not comfortable after that, change jobs.

Dear Abby: I am cleaning out my closet and have decided to sell my wedding dress. My 16-year-old daughter has made it clear to me she will never marry. The thing is, she wants to try my dress on. I don't want her to because she doesn't agree with the sanctity of marriage or the commitment of it, and I don't want my wedding dress tried on by anyone who feels this way about marriage. It means more than playing dress-up, and I believe it should be worn only by someone who respects it. Am I wrong? Does my daughter have a right to have hurt feelings over this? — Not A Game Of Dress-Up

Dear Not: You are not wrong. But if you are trying to impose your values on your teenage daughter, I seriously doubt it will work. I wish you had mentioned why your daughter feels the way she does. Have you asked her that question? Rather than argue about whether she has a right to put on YOUR wedding dress, A discussion about what she thinks it symbolizes to you — as well as what trying it on means to her — might be more productive.

Dear Abby: I'm having trouble with feelings I probably shouldn't be having about someone. She's always walking around in her underwear when I come over. I like it, of course, but I'm not sure if it is meant to tease me or if I should act on it. I'd really appreciate your help. — Confused In The East

Dear Confused: A positive message of the #MeToo movement has been that when there is a shadow of a doubt, a person should COMMUNICATE to avoid any unfortunate misunderstandings. In this case, it would be appropriate to ask this woman why she walks around in a state of undress when you are there, because you are not sure how to interpret the message it sends. DO NOT ACT ON ANYTHING UNLESS HER RESPONSE IS THAT IT WOULD BE WELCOMED.

DAYS GONE BY FROM THE EAST OREGONIAN

100 Years Ago Sept. 23, 1921

George Hackathorn, Pendleton boy becoming famous in the movies has been cast to play the minister opposite Betty Compson in the picturization of Barrie's "The Little Minister." Hackathorn has had many prominent parts but the role of the minister will perhaps be his most prominent. He will be remembered as playing the role of Capt. Randolph in the picturization of "The Last of the Mohicans."

Editor's note, 2021: George Hackathorne (1896-1940), an actor of the silent area, was raised in Pendleton. He appeared in more than 50 films between 1916 and 1939. He played Sid Sawyer in "Tom Sawyer" and "Huck and Tom" (1917 and 1918, respectively) at the request of Mary Pickford. He went on to play minor roles in a number of films but did not fare well with the coming of sound. His last film role was that of a wounded soldier in "Gone with the Wind."

50 Years Ago Sept. 23, 1971

Dez and Irene Young, hosts of the Hi Neighbor show on KOIN-TV, Portland, were in Pendleton for the Round-Up. It was a first visit for Irene, and a return to his former home for Dez. Born Frank Dennis Young, Dez is the son of former Kay Isaac of Pendleton. He attended school in Athena, Helix and Pendleton. Hi Neighbor is a locally produced show aimed at the homemaker, with interviews on widely varied subjects and music by the KOIN orchestra. Irene is hostess of the noon program. The Youngs brought along their six-year-old son, Glenn, to the Round-Up, and one of the first things they did was buy him a cowboy hat.

25 Years Ago Sept. 23, 1996

What could have just been another tragic teen-age auto accident has become the story of a community pulling together to help a neighbor. When five Heppner teens were involved in a pickup accident on July 11 of this year, the town pulled together to assist the families. Accounts were established at the local branch of the Bank of Eastern Oregon, but the assistance didn't stop there. None have felt the caring effort more than the Dohertys. Their 17-year-old son Adam was the most seriously injured and is now using a wheelchair for transportation. Adam's father, Mike, his voice choked with emotion, said the owner of Kinzua and employees donated nearly $4,000, plus a group volunteered their time and labor to improve an access ramp and deck at the Dohertys' home. They cleared vegetation and put in a six-foot wide roofed deck that wraps more than halfway around the house and supports a ramp to the front door. A new sidewalk from the back patio around the garage completes the design, allowing Adam access to all doors.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On Sept. 23, 1955, a jury in Sumner, Mississippi, acquitted two white men, Roy Bryant and J.W. Milam, of murdering Black teenager Emmett Till. (The two men later admitted to the crime in an interview with Look magazine.)

In 1779, during the Revolutionary War, the American warship Bon Homme Richard, commanded by John Paul Jones, defeated the HMS Serapis in battle off Yorkshire, England.

In 1806, the Lewis and Clark expedition returned to St. Louis more than two years after setting out for the Pacific Northwest.

In 1846, Neptune was identified as a planet by German astronomer Johann Gottfried Galle.

In 1932, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia was founded.

In 1949, President Harry S. Truman announced there was evidence the Soviet Union had recently conducted a nuclear test explosion. (The test had been carried out on Aug. 29, 1949.)

In 1952, Sen. Richard M. Nixon, R-Calif., salvaged his vice-presidential nomination by appearing on television from Los Angeles to refute allegations of improper campaign fundraising in what became known as the "Checkers" speech.

In 1957, nine Black students who'd entered Little Rock Central High School in Arkansas were forced to withdraw because of a white mob outside.

In 1987, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., withdrew from the Democratic presidential race following questions about his use of borrowed quotations and the portrayal of his academic record.

In 2001, President George W. Bush returned the American flag to full staff at Camp David, symbolically ending a period of national mourning following the 9/11 attacks.

In 2002, Gov. Gray Davis signed a law making California the first state to offer workers paid family leave.
