Hermiston students place third at National FFA competition

Hermiston Herald

HERMISTON — The Hermiston FFA Agricultural Issues Forum Team last week faced off against the top teams in the nation and came away with the bronze.

"These students represent some of the best and brightest young minds in the United States. I am beyond proud of the hard work and dedication that they have put in to accomplish this amazing achievement," Sandy McKay, Hermiston FFA advisor, said in a press release from the Hermiston School District.

The team competed Oct. 27 in Indianapolis at the FFA National Convention. This was the semi-final round of the competition after the team competed virtually in the regional round of competition earlier this year.

A field of the best 16 teams from across the nation entered the semi-finals, and Hermiston FFA advanced to the final round to compete against the top four teams.

In the final round, the teams started with a clean slate and their final placings were decided based on their performance in the finals and round of questions. They also performed in front of a new panel of judges and, for the first time, a live audience of several thousand FFA members, advisors and convention guests.

After a 24-hour wait, the final placings were announced at the National FFA Convention's Second Business Session in front of a crowd of over 53,000 in Lucas Oil Stadium, home of the Indianapolis Colts.

With hundreds of thousands more watching on the FFA livestream and RFD TV, according to the press release, Hermiston FFA was recognized as the third-place team in the United States. The awards presentation also included individual Gold Medals for the team members and a cash prize for the Hermiston FFA Chapter.

The team consists of Hermiston students and recent graduates who have been competing for more than 10 months to reach this point. The team members are Alexis Leathers, Sidney Estes, Anna Guerrero, Abby Conners, Grant Hills, Daytona Tracy and Keeva Hoston.

The "Ag Issues" Career Development Event requires FFA members to select a contentious issue at the forefront of agriculture, research it and create a skit debating two sides of an issue to demonstrate the pros and cons of the topic.

Hermiston chose the emerging vertical farming industry as its topic and compared it to traditional farming in a skit that mimicked a classroom setting. After the performance, the team faced questions from industry judges, at each level of competition, to reach the pinnacle of FFA competition: the National Convention stage in Indianapolis.

The Hermiston FFA

Agricultural Communications Team also competed at the FFA National Convention on Oct. 27. As with the Ag Issues team, this was the semi-final round of the competition after the team previously competed virtually in the regional round of competition earlier this year.

Again, 16 teams made the cut. The Hermiston FFA Chapter was recognized as one of the best in the field, earning the second-highest award with a Silver Team Award and plaque. The awards also included individual medals for each team member based on their individual placings.

Participants in the Agricultural Communications Career Development Event work as a team of communication consultants to develop a written media plan, present the plan to a panel of judges, and, as individuals, apply what they have learned during practicums, a quiz, and editing exercise. Students will use a variety of media in their plans, including social media, broadcast and print advertising and more.

Students Kylie Temple, Ashlyn Hofbauer, Cadence Cooley and Elizabeth Doherty make up the Hermiston FFA team. The students have been working on this competition for 10 months. They won the Oregon state title, moved through the first round of nationals, and competed strongly in the semi-finals round in Indianapolis.

The press release also stated the school district board at its November business meeting plans to recognize the teams to highlight their participation and success at the national competition.
