in the Northwest behind Jeremiah Nubbe of Rainier, Washington, who has thrown 205-2. Nubbe will not throw at the Pasco Invite. The Invite discus record is 189-7 by Mead's Jason Baskett in 1990. The stadium record is 190-2, set by Nate Rolfe of Inglemoor in 2004. Hottman also will throw the shot put. His top mark this year is 56 feet, which is the best in Washington this spring.

Hermiston's Bailey Young will face a tough challenge in the shot put and discus in Hanford's Katelynn Gelston, who placed first in the discus at the Arcadia Invite with a throw of 156-0, and was sixth in the shot put at 40-7.

Young's top mark in the shot put this season is 42-8 1/2, while her top discus throw is 111-9.

and has high expectations for the athletes in her programs."

"It's been a while since Speer has been on the bench in Pendleton.

"I don't know a ton of the players," she said. "I haven't really looked into that. I am going to start fresh and have tryouts in August. I'm excited to do more with them in the community."

Until then, Speer is busy coaching her son Braxton's rookie Little League team.

"It has been a blast to coach these young kids," she said. "I leave there smiling after every game."

A little bit of everything

Speer was a standout volleyball, basketball and softball player at Pendleton.

"I loved that, being able to do all three sports," Speer said. "Actually, softball was my main sport my whole life. I spent more time doing that than any other sport. I didn't know about club volleyball back then. You played whatever sport we were in."

Just when she thought softball would be her ticket to college, a state volleyball playoff game her senior year gave her second thoughts.

"We played Central Catholic in a state playoff game," she said. "I thought I didn't want it to end. I played volleyball and softball at Mt. Hood."

Speer's volleyball career at Mt. Hood got off to a great start as the Saints won the 2001 NWAC tournament and she earned a spot on the all-tournament team. She also made the All-NWAC second-team.

Things then went from good to bad in a split second. The softball season also started well for Speer, as she was named Most Valuable Player of the pre-season Columbia Basin Tournament in Pasco.

Not long after, she tore her anterior cruciate ligament during practice, which ended her season, along with the entire 2002 volleyball season. "It was one of the hardest things I've been through," she said at the time. "Everything happens for a reason, and I'm still not sure why it happened. It did make me realize that volleyball was the sport I wanted to play more."

Speer was ready to play during the 2003 softball season. She earned first-team All-NWAC honors.

She returned to the Saints for the 2003 volleyball season and earned first-team All-NWAC honors.

At the end of her Mt. Hood career, Speer received the Female Athlete of the Year Award.

Her next stop was Portland State University, where she played volleyball and earned her bachelor of arts degree in community health education.

Now, she's back home where it all started.

On the offensive side, Eastern has seen balanced plate production across its lineup. With no major standouts atop the conference individual stat rankings, the Mountaineers have entered games with the mentality that any player can step up when called upon.

"We're spread out and at any given moment one of our athletes can do damage," Christian said. "We love that with our program, we can look at our lineup and know that anyone can get it done."

The Mountaineers earned two monumental victories in early April, defeating No. 5 College of Idaho in two consecutive games. The Mountaineers previously lost two home games to their rivals in late March, but bounced back to even the season series.

While Christian noted the team takes the season one game at a time, the victory over a conference powerhouse had a positive impact on the team's morale and momentum.

"That series was huge," she said. "It definitely was a good testament, they have a great program with good pitching. Being able to go on the road and execute what we wanted to do was a great momentum builder."

Moving into the final segments of the regular season, Christian stated the remaining schedule will be ideal for getting the team's players into the best form heading into the postseason. Eastern's final three series are all on weekends, allowing for recovery and practice during the weekdays as opposed to travel and competitions.

The Mountaineers are set to travel to Bellevue, Washington, to face Northwest in a four-game series beginning on April 15. The Mountaineers will have a crucial four-game slate against top-ranked conference opponent Oregon Tech, before closing out the regular season with a four-game home series against Carroll.

"We've got our hands full these next three weeks, but we're just taking it one game at a time," Christian said. "We expect a battle every weekend in our conference."
