STUDENTS

Altrusa awards trio of scholarships

HERMISTON — Altrusa International of Hermiston recently announced the recipients of its Dorothy Juve Memorial Scholarship. Each of the three individuals will receive $1,000 toward their college education.

The scholarship is awarded each spring to worthy applicants who are approximately ¾ finished with their college education.

Josie Goodrich attends school at Washington State University, where she is pursuing a double major in multimedia journalism and criminal justice and criminology. She plans to be a news reporter for the WSU school paper. A member of the Women's Professional Rodeo Association, Goodrich would like to conduct interviews at rodeos, ultimately interviewing for the Cowboy Channel.

Ericka Wells attends school at Eastern Oregon University, where she is an English writing major with a minor in anthropology.

She would ultimately like to get an endorsement in English for Speakers of other Languages and a Spanish degree. Wells has already written a book series and published a column about suicide prevention in the Hermiston Herald. Her goal is to become a full-time published writer.

Ray Agosto, who attends Oregon State University, is working on a bachelor's degree in fine arts with a major in graphic design and a minor in photography. His goal is to join a marketing team with an athletic company. His dream job would be to work for Nike where he would design apparel, banners and more.

Altrusa is an international nonprofit organization that strives to make local communities better through leadership, partnership and service. The international service organization celebrated its centennial in 2017. The Hermiston club was organized May 14, 1977. For more information, email Altrusa at hermiston-altrusa@gmail.com.
