

Cruisin' cars glisten at BMCC

ABOVE and RIGHT: Car enthusiasts check out some of the rides Saturday, May 14, 2022, at Blue Mountain Community College's 10th annual Cruisin' for Scholarships Car Show in Pendleton. Several American muscle cars were on display, as well as a few much older classics, a couple of pickups and more. The event, however, drew fewer cars than in years past, perhaps due to the rainy morning.

benefits of sports, adventure activities, music and art to vulnerable youth.

Building Healthy Families' award is to help construct a bicycle playground in Wallowa. The project increases access to recreation opportunities to improve health and well-being for kids throughout the community.

Lori Wyman, Pacific Power regional business manager for Eastern Oregon, in the press release said, "These organizations are our local heroes — working tirelessly to deliver safety, health and wellness programs to neighbors in our communities, and we're honored to support their work."

The safety and wellness funds are part of the foundation's quarterly grant-giving each year.

PHS student places second in statewide media contest

SALEM — A sophomore from Pendleton High School was among those who earned top prizes in a media contest designed to increase awareness about workplace safety for young workers. Julianne Jones became aware of the Oregon Young Employee Safety Coalition contest through an online advertisement.

The theme, which included highlighting the mental well-being of young workers, piqued Jones' interest. She said students are faced with struggles trying to juggle school, work, extracurricular activities and generally try to figure out life.

"I felt that this theme had some really good overlap with our mission at CommuniCare," she said.

A member of the CommuniCare Club at Pendleton High School, Jones said the statewide organization invites students to become involved in their communities through volunteer work, fundraising and awarding grants to nonprofit organizations. Part of the club's mission, she said, is to assist "individuals by destigmatizing the topic of mental health."

Jones approached Jill Gregg, PHS CommuniCare advisor, about entering the young workers safety contest. Gregg was especially thrilled that Jones' efforts were recognized with second place.

"I would also like to commend Julianne on taking the initiative on this opportunity," Gregg said. "She put in all the work."

being asked to pick up some extra shifts at work, Jones recruited her dad, Roy Jones, to act as a supervisor and Nicholas Jennings manned the camera. Titled "Be Bold for Better Balance," as a young worker Jones demonstrated being torn by competing expectations and obligations.

Jones understands the need to find balance and set healthy boundaries in regards to work, school and personal interests. In addition to CommuniCare, Jones is involved in FCCLA (Family, Career and Community Leaders of America). She engages in volunteer activities and fundraisers through her involvement with both clubs.

In addition, Jones volunteers as a cashier at the Community Thrift Shop, which benefits the Umatilla County Historical Society. She also serves on the Pendleton Public Library Teen Council and was recognized as the city of Pendleton Youth Volunteer of the year in 2019.

Jones was excited to receive the news that her submission placed second, which included a $400 prize. In addition, it's featured on the Oregon Young Employee Safety website.

"I hope that it helps young workers be bold in learning to set healthy boundaries in order to achieve a better work/school/life balance. Setting those boundaries and maintaining that balance is an ongoing struggle for me and I want all of my peers to know that they are not alone."
