ELGIN — Characters step out of the comics and onto the stage in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," playing July 29 and 30 at the Elgin Opera House, 104 N. Eighth Ave.

Based on the "Peanuts" comic strip by Charles M. Schulz, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" is a high-energy Broadway musical following a day in the life of Charlie Brown. The production takes place in a series of connected vignettes, just like the Peanuts comic strip, and the entire stage at the Elgin Opera House has been painted to heighten the effect.

"It's like opening the newspaper and reading the comic strips," Abby Hale said. "It's a really fun show."

Hale, 19, portrays Charlie Brown's charismatic beagle, Snoopy, alongside 15-year-old Grant Deem as the title character.

"Charlie Brown is a really fun character to play," Deem said. "He's a really defined character — it's both more work and less

"You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown" will also feature youth from the Elgin Opera House annual summer camp for a total cast of more than 80 children and teenagers. Although the campers will learn a dance during the week before the show opens, the core cast and lead ensemble have been rehearsing most of the summer to prepare for the full production.

Making his stage debut, Gorham, 13, said the process has been surreal.

"The lines are pretty tough, learning a whole monologue, but it's a great experience," he said.

While Gorham said he can connect with Schroeder through a love of music — Gorham plays three instruments — other actors have less in common with their characters. As Lucy, Buckley, 16, spends much of her time tormenting Charlie Brown.

"I like that I get to be really mean. I'm not like that at all," she said.

The musical includes 14 songs, some of which have advanced choreography. In addition to playing Snoopy, Hale is also the show's choreographer. She said audience members who have seen Charlie Brown videos may recognize some of the dance moves.
