

NORTHCOTT IS FOUND GUILTY

Report Indicates Appeal to Supreme Court to be Attempted Next

 Young Wineville chicken rancher was only calmly informing the court, however, that he considered "all legal forms had been complied with," and that he felt a pull of the jury to be unnecessary.

Authorities, however, were prepared to cope with any reaction in the prisoner's demeanor during the night. Consummate actor that he proved himself to be in the court room, Sheriff Sweeters feared that in the privacy of his cell he might succumb to despair and attempt suicide, as he has in the past threatened to do. Northcott's cell, within a locked corridor, was left open tonight, with an armed guard seated in the doorway.

The jury reached its verdict after two hours and 24 minutes of actual deliberation. It took the case at 5:05 p. m., and signalled that it had reached its decision at 8:20. Nearly an hour of that time, however, was spent at dinner.

Two official and two unofficial ballots, to discover the "state of mind" of the jurors, were taken, the jury revealed.
 On both official and unofficial ballots to decide the defendant's guilt, the 12 men were unanimous for conviction. On the unofficial ballot to decide the penalty, however, the vote stood 10 to 2 for a capital verdict. The official ballot, taken some time later, showed the two dubious ones to have been won over.

Superior Judge George R. Freeman set next Monday at 10 a. m., as the time of sentence. At that time Northcott is expected to file notice of appeal. The transcript for the appeal is understood to be already in preparation, under direction of McKinley Cameron, Canadian barrister who represented Northcott during expedition pro-

Making Census

Miss Rachel Jenas, of the office of Indian affairs of the department of the interior at Washington, is making a census of Papago and Pima Indian tribes, having reservation in Arizona. Miss Jenas recently completed a census of the largest of American Indian tribes, the Navajos, residing chiefly in northern Arizona.

Northcott spent the greater part of the day before the jury box, in a last dramatically quiet appeal for his life. He called upon the jury to witness his composure, and challenged them to find him guilty.

"No person could stand here, looking you in the eye as I am, if he were not speaking the truth," he said.

After watching the jury retire with the bitterly denunciatory phrases of Chief Deputy District Attorney Earle C. Redwine, who closed for the state, ringing in his ears, Northcott went to his cell and ate a hearty dinner. While there he sent for Cameron, and asked him:

"Well, how are you standing the strain?"
 Deputy District Attorney Redwine had frequently levelled an accusing finger at Northcott during his scathing address.

Higher Tariff on Fine Raw Wool Asked by Sheep Men

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—(AP)—Wool manufacturers lined up behind the sheep raisers today for higher tariff protection on fine raw wools, and at the same time put in a plea for themselves for a boost in the rates on higher grade manufactured yards and fabrics.

Nathaniel Stevens, vice-president of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, testified before the house ways and means committee at its hearing on wool duties that the manufacturers were in harmony with the growers in their plea for additional protection on high grade raw wools. He added, however, that if the increase of from five to nine cents a pound proposed on raw wool was granted, the manufacturers would need higher compensatory duties on goods of fine quality.

Costs Said Higher
 He based this conclusion on estimates showing that labor costs were much higher in the manufacture of the fine wools as compared with those in the coarse goods trade and that even under the present rate of 81 cents a pound on the clean content of wool in the grease slightly higher duties on the manufactured articles were required.

Stevens likened conditions in the wool manufacturing industry to those in the cotton textile trade, with factories operating at only 60 per cent capacity. He said imports were displacing 41,000,000 pounds of domestic wool in the American market and were keeping from employment from 12,000 to 15,000 persons.

Home competition, he said, would hold down prices to consumers and not make them bear the burden of higher prices under a higher tariff.

Scheel also proposed the basing of ad valorem duties on American instead of foreign valuation, contending that efforts to obtain values abroad were meeting with opposition.
