PERFORMANCE FEB. 25-MARCH 3

The World Goes 'Round

Tigard's Broadway Rose Theatre presents a musical revue of songs by John Kander and Fred Ebb, who contributed tunes to Cabaret and Chicago, and crafted the theme song to Martin Scorsese's New York, New York. Broadway Rose New Stage Theatre, 12850 SW Grant Ave., Tigard, 620-5262. 7-30 pm Thursdays-Saturdays and 2 pm Saturdays-Sundays through March 1. $30-$42.

Down to Funny

Comedians Katie Brien and Hutch Harris (you might also know the latter from a little band called the Thermals) produce a twice-monthly standup showcase, this time featuring sets from Bri Pruett, Chase Brockett, Kirsten Kuppenbender and David Mascorro. Analog Cafe, 720 SE Hawthorne Blvd. 8 pm Thursday, Feb. 26. Donation.

5225 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., 477-9477. 9:30 pm every fourth Friday. $7.

Naked Comedy Open Mic

The Brody hosts a thrice-weekly open-mic night. Comics get four-minute standup slots and can sign up online. Brody Theater, 16 NW Broadway, 224-2227. 9:30 pm every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Free with one-item minimum purchase.

Open Court

Team-based, long-form improv open to audience members and performers of all stripes. Curious Comedy, 5225 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., 477-9477. 7:30 pm every Thursday. $5.

Random Acts of Comedy

Curious Comedy puts on a free-wheeling show that brings together sketch, standup and improv. Curious Comedy, 5225 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., 477-9477. 9:30 pm every Saturday. $7-$10.

Rob Delaney

Comedy Central has proclaimed him the funniest man on Twitter ("Doughnuts are gay bagels"), but Delaney is pretty funny live, too, with plenty of pathos alongside the outlandish bits. Crystal Ballroom, 1332 W Burnside St., 225-0047. 8 pm Sunday, March 1. $25.

Taylor Williamson

Young standup comedian Taylor Williamson may not have won America's Got Talent, but he did develop the flirtiest relationship with Heidi Klum in the show's history. He hits Helium for a three-night run. Helium Comedy Club, 1510 SE 9th Ave., 888-643-8669. 8 pm Thursday and 7:30 and 10 pm Friday-Saturday, Feb. 26-28. $15-$30. 21+.

You Are Here

The Brody ensemble puts on a weekly improv showcase, generally featuring a ton of audience participation. Brody Theater, 16 NW Broadway, 224-2227. 8 pm every Friday. $9-$12.

DANCE

Alonzo King LINES Ballet

Dance presenter White Bird kicked off its first round of "Barney" creative prizes in 2013, awarded as a grant that recognizes innovative choreographers from around the world. The first winner? British choreographer Alonzo King, known for tingeing his classic-ballet techniques with splashes of contemporary technique. He returns to Portland for the first

COMEDY & VARIETY

Bam!

The Brody folks present a new improv show, in which the performers begin the show blindfolded—and thus unable to see how the stage is set or how they're being costumed. Once the blindfolds come off, the ad-libbing begins. REBECCA JACOBSON, Brody Theater, 16 NW Broadway, 224-2227. 9:30 pm Saturdays through Feb. 28. $8.

Baron Vaughn

Comedian Baron Vaughn has made a serious impression at the Bridgetown Comedy Festival over the years—he's got a super-lively stage presence and a slightly absurdist way of framing totally mundane things ("I bet when you first started walking, giants that looked like you came out and took pictures"). He hits Portland as part of standup showcase Funny Over Everything. REBECCA JACOBSON, Hollywood Theatre, 4122 NE Sandy Blvd., 281-4215. 8 pm Friday, Feb. 27. $10.

Control Yourself: A Showcase of Funny

JoAnn Schinderle—a Midwest transplant with a high-energy, engaging style—hosts a free, twice-monthly standup showcase, followed by an open mic at 10 pm. Alberta Street Pub, 1036 NE Alberta St., 284-7665. 9 pm every first and third Sunday. Free. 21+.

Curious Comedy Open Mic

Curious hosts a weekly open-mic night. Sign-ups begin at 7:15, and comics get three minutes of stage time apiece. Curious Comedy, 5225 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., 477-9477. 8 pm every Sunday. Free.

Curious Comedy Showdown

Curious Comedy's improvisers duke it out, in hopes of winning audience votes and advancing to the next round of competition. Curious Comedy, 5225 NE Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd., 477-9477. 7:30 pm every Friday and Saturday. $12-$15.

Earthquake Hurricane

An army of impressive Portland comedians—Curtis Cook, Alex Falcone, Bri Pruett and Anthony Lopez—host a weekly standup showcase with some of the funniest people you'll ever see in the basement of a bike shop. Kickstand Comedy Space, 1969 NE 42nd Ave., 937-219-1334. 8:30 pm every Wednesday. $5 suggested.

Funny Humans vs. the Wheel

If you go to enough shows around town, you start to memorize comedians' sets. Think of this weekly show, hosted by silly duo Adam Pasi and David Mascorro, as an antidote to all that repetition: Comedians start out with a planned set, but halfway through, they have to spin a wheel to determine what comes next—crowd work, one-liners, maybe even a heckle battle. Bar of the Gods, 4801 SE Hawthorne Blvd., 232-2037. 9 pm every Sunday. Free. 21+.

Helium Open Mic

Generally regarded the best open-mic night in town, Helium's sign-ups fill quickly. Show up between 6 and 7 pm to snag some stage time. Helium Comedy Club, 1510 SE 9th Ave., 888-643-8669. 8 pm every Tuesday. Free with a two-item minimum. 21+.

It's Gonna Be Okay

Hosted by the ever-chipper Barbara Holm, this twice-monthly showcase is a prime spot to catch Portland's top comics, as well as the occasional out-of-towner. The cozy basement room is almost always packed (especially impressive for a Monday night), and Holm often tosses out prizes—plastic dinosaur figurines, comic books—to audience members. Also: free skeeball afterward. EastBurn, 1800 E Burnside St., 236-2876. 8:30 pm every first and third Monday. Free. 21+.

Minority Retort
