LATEST EASTERN NEWS.

New York, Aug. 27.—The work of destroying the Weldon railroad is still progressing. Officers from the front report all quiet, except slight skirmishing. Lee's forces have evidently been materially reduced during the past few days. A new position has been gained on the Weldon railroad which renders Grant's army more confident of success than at any time during the campaign.

Headquarters Army of the Potomac, Aug. 24, Evening—All quiet to-day except the usual cannonading. Our left has been extended six or seven miles, holding securely the Weldon road to Reams Station, a distance of seven miles. No rebels are to be seen on our left front. The entire loss of the 5th corps, on the 21st, was 5,000. The corps fought splendidly. The 2d army corps, on the 20th, made an attack at 5:30, P. M., which was probably intended to be simultaneous, by Wilcox in the centre and Heath on the left. The enemy formed in the woods, and placing their artillery in position, opened a heavy cannonading which lasted 15 minutes, when assault was made on Miles' force. He resisted tenaciously, but the enemy broke his left. Some of Gibbon's troops hurried over to repair the damage. In the meantime the enemy gained a foothold, and attempting to turn our left, drove Gibbon's division from his line. His men were very tired in marching over to Miles' position and back during the repeated assaults, but he succeeded in reforming his line and checked the enemy by the dismounted cavalry, under Gregg. Miles also regained the best of his entrenchments. The enemy made no further advance. They must have suffered severely. My loss, including the cavalry, cannot exceed 1,200 or 1,500. This is acknowledged to be the most desperate battle of the war, resembling Spottsylvania, though the number engaged give less importance. A few more good troops would have given us a victory of considerable importance. A dispatch from the 2d army corps, on the 26th, says: The safeguard left on the battlefield remained there until after daylight. At that time the enemy had all disappeared, leaving their dead on the field unburied. This shows how severely they were punished. Doubtless hearing of the arrival of reinforcements, they feared the results of to-day. The safeguard referred to, reports the enemy as having retired in the direction of Petersburg. They abandoned their wounded. The guard conversed with a rebel officer, who said that their loss was greater than ever before during the war. The guard say they were over the field. It is covered with the enemy's dead and wounded.

Boston, Aug. 26.—Several prominent abolitionists, including Elizur Wright and S. G. How, have written a letter to Gen. Fremont, which speaks of the dissatisfaction in the Union ranks, and advising both the Baltimore and Cleveland nominees to withdraw their names, and that a new convention be called to select another and new candidate. Fremont replied at length that he did not feel at liberty to withdraw, without first consulting the party. He suggests that a direct effort be made to obtain an immediate understanding between the supporters of both nominees, in order that they may coalesce and unite upon such a convention. He says, much has been said about peace; for me, peace signifies an integral establishment of a Union without slavery, because slavery is the source of all political dissentions, and because the institution itself is condemned by the enlightened and liberal spirit of the age. These are to me the essential conditions of peace.

New York, August 27.—The Times' Washington dispatch says that a gentleman arrived in this city from Georgia, who came by Atlanta, with the permission of Sherman. He represents that the State Government desires to learn upon what basis the United States Government will treat with the State of Georgia for readmission into the Union. The action of Georgia is had without reference to the rest of the Confederacy.

New York, Aug. 29.—The Tribune's Washington special sums up the result of the fighting on Weldon railroad as follows: 1st. The enemy after repeated and impetuous assaults compelled our abandoning the railroad below Reams' Station. 2d. Although attacking in vastly superior numbers, the rebels received a bloody repulse in successive instances. 3d. Their loss is nearly double ours, and we had fully accomplished our object by the destruction of ten miles of railroad from Reams's Station, but had decided to abandon the position. We lost but four miles of the road. Richmond papers of the 28th, admit a loss of 6,000 in the attack on Reams' Station. Prisoners say their loss is about 5,000. Another attack is soon expected, Lee having recalled the troops from Shenandoah valley for that purpose. The indications are that a heavy battle will be fought near Atlanta, on the Macon Railroad, before the end of the present week.

New York, Aug. 31.—Dispatches from Grant indicate that Lee has ceased to struggle for the recovery of Weldon railroad, which is completely in our possession. No fighting occurred yesterday or to-day before Petersburg or front. Early's forces are in full retreat up the valley, and our cavalry are closely pursuing in the rear of the retreating column, and are capturing many stragglers.—Oregonian.
