FROWERS FROM HOME.

Flowers! beautiful flowers!
But these a perfume bear
Richer than if from eastern bowers
They brought their blossoms rare.

These delicate blessoms hung Round a green porch far away, Where the music of young laughter rung Prom children at their play;

And within, one of graver-air Gazed thoughtfullytha while, Marking the place of a vacant chair, Missing an answering smile.

Say, hast thou the secret read Of Association's lore, When Memory suddenly outspread . Its strange life-gathered store?

Words that have long been hid; Tones that for years have lain, By the heart's cunning treasured In pearl shells of the brain. Quick as the chemist's spark

Awakened can dispense Through myriad miles of ocean dark Its bright intelligence.

An odour or a tone
O'er a life's barren track
Of unremembered hours has flown,
Bringing to manhood back

The maddening of a draught
From Passion's flowers distilled;
Or soberer cup, securely quaffed,
Of pronfises fulfilled.

So the sweet scent of spring From these co-cross petals flung, Brings visions of fairy ordering. 'Neath their dawy custers hung.

I see the well-known group
At the far off portal stand;
I hear the shout of the merry troop,
I see the outstretched hand

Chiding the tardy post:
I know the bounding spring
Of the jealous race who first to the host
The treasured leaves may bring,

The ring of the welcome cheer,
The old familiar tone,
The beaming smile, and the welling tear,
For love of the absent one.
