LONG AND FINE WOOLS .- The late extraordinary rise in the price of coarse wool we had supposed was mainly owing to the demand of our government for blankets and clothing for the soldiers. The following article copied from the Mark Lane Express suggests a more permanent and satisfactory reason for this singular change :-

"An extraordinary change in fact has taken place in the trade, by virtue of which the long and the fine short wools have changed places, the former having advanced and the latter receded in price, especially lamb's wool, which formerly was the most valuable of any kind of native growth. This discription has fallen to about 14 pence, or 28 cents per lb, while Leicestershire teggs or hoggett's wool from the same sheep will fetch, or has fetched 2s. 6d., or 60 cents per lb, the fleece weighing 14 lb. The causes for so strange an alteration in the wool trade are various, but may be traced in the introduction of the Alpae or Lama wool from Peru. The length and fineness of this material enabled the manufacturer to make a kind of fibric ontirely new to the British market, namely, those light gossamer stuffs known as alpacas, so much prized and worn by our fair countrywomen. The success of this materi al set the manufacturers to work to attempt imitations of it from the long wools of British growth. In this they succeeded, especially since the invention of combing wool by machinery about fourteen years ago, which greatly improved the operation as well as the uniformity of the material upon which it was employed. By using this machine, wool can now be combed of two-and-a-half inches in length, but it is the long Lencolnshire, Yorkshire, Romney Marsh, and Cotswolds that have so much increased in value since the introduction of Lama Alpaca wool. The facility for perfecting these wools for the purpose of making imitations of Alpaca fabrics, is one of the causes of the advance; for the enormous de-mand for such fabrics for foreign countries with the supply limited to the growth of the United Kingdom, has rendered this far more scarce than the short wool, of which the amount from our colonies of Australia and New Zealand is annually increasing.

MEN Gossip .- To speak ill of your friend to his face is bad manners; but to asperse him to a party of mutual friends when he is not there is not "quite the thing." It is really saddening to find how common this practice is in upper class dwellings. We once spent the day at the house of a literary man of some distinction, who should also have known better, yet the conversation could be compared to nothing so much as to passing sentence of a jail delivery of notorious characters. Author and artist vied with each other in judicial or rather an extra judicial severity. Statesmen, literary men, painters, clergymen, patriots, exiles—all were arraigned and condemned. One was a coxcomb, another a common cheat, a third a hypocrite, a fourth a clever profligate, a fifth a profligate and fool combined, a sixth a snob and sycophant, and so on.

A little girl, after returning from church, where she saw a collection taken up for the first time, related what took place, and among other things she said, with all her childish innocence, that "a man passed around a plate that had some money on it, but I didn't take any."
