INSURRECTION IN JAMAICA—BRUTALITY OF THE NEGROES.—The atrocities of the "Black" rebellion in Jamaica more befits the condition of the negro in his wild state in Africa than one would suppose could be possible to be committed by blacks that claim to be free and civilized. The Colonial Standard of the 20th ult., says that after the negroes had taken possession of St. Thomas, the volunteers being overpowered, took refuge in the Court House, where the Custos, the Magistrate, Clergy and other gentlemen were. Finding that these parties had taken shelter, they smashed the windows to atoms, firing continually into the Court House, when the volunteers returned their fire, doing good service.

About half-past five o'clock the Court House was fired. The Custos then put out a flag of truce by advice of the Clerk of the Peace. The rioters asked what it meant, and were answered peace! They said they did not want peace, they wanted war. A second flag of truce was put out, with no better effect, the rebels cried out, war! war! On the roof of the Court House falling in, through the fire that had been set to the premises, the Custos and other gentlemen burst open the doors and ran down the steps; the rebels attacked them in every direction. The Custos were butchered in the most frightful manner; the fingers of his right hand were jointed, the rebels saying that was the dead hand that wrote the Queen against us. They publicly stated during the day that the Custos and Magistrates had written the Queen lies against them, and that they would show the Queen that day what the negro could do when oppressed and lies told upon them; that Mr. Gordon had informed Paul Bogle when the Vestry was to be held, and that the Custos would be present. They dug out the eyes of almost every one they murdered; they cut the tongue out of the Rev. Mr. Victor Herschell, cut his throat and partially skinned him; the also murdered a black gentleman, Mr. Price, in cold blood, in the most barbarous and brutal manner, and then ripped open his bowels.

A GOOD WIFE.—How much of this world's happiness and prosperity are contained in the compass of these two words! Her influence is immense. The power of a wife, for good or evil, is irresistible. Home must be the seat of happiness, or it must be forever unknown. A good wife is to a man wisdom, courage, strength, hope, endurance. A bad one is confusion, weakness, discomfort and despair. No condition is hopeless, when the wife possesses firmness, decision, energy and economy. There is no outward prosperity which can counteract indolence, folly and extravagance at home. No spirit can long resist bad domestic influence. Man is strong, but his heart is not adamant. Man delights in enterprise and action, but to sustain him he needs a tranquil mind and a whole heart. He expends his whole moral force in the conflicts of the world; his feelings are often lacerated to the utmost point of endurance by perpetual collision, irritations and disappointment. To recover his equanimity and composure, home must be to him a place of repose, peace, cheerfulness, comfort, where his soul renews its strength and again goes forth with fresh vigor, to encounter the labor and trouble of the world. But, if at home he finds no rest, and is there met with bad temper, sullenness or gloom, or is assailed by discontent, complaint and reproaches, the heart breaks, the spirits are crushed, hope forever banished, and the man sinks into almost total despair. A lazy, ignorant, extravagant, restless, ill-natured wife, is indeed a curse, while one possessed of the opposite qualities is truly "the angel of the house."

SECRETARY SEWARD'S FACE.—Mr. Seward took off the inconvenient and complicated apparatus of his fractured jaw-bone and now wears a simple india-rubber bandage on the outside of the face only. The gland in his cheek which was severed by Payno's knife has not yet wholly recovered, and there is still much inflammation about the wound. A great scar on the right side of his face still shows the desperate nature of the cut received from that assassin. It looks as if the entire cheek had been amputated and fitted on again. The mouth is also much distorted, the right corner of it being raised an inch above its proper line. No former acquaintance would recognize the venerable statesman, so much is his countenance changed by the dreadful injuries.
