THE CITY TRADE.

Dattes, December 7, 1865. As winter closes in on the upper country, males of goods have declined to almost nothing, and shipments up the river are reduced to a tithe of those going forward in summer.

The discovery of mines on the upper section of the Columbia River, promises to benefit this place in a very great degree. The agricultural lands lying north of the river will be called upon to suppy these mines with many of the leading articles of subsistence, and with the growth of farming settlements in that direction will come a new and most important element in our local trade. This will be permanent in its nature, and after the mines, which will hasten the development of these lands, have ceased to yield up their treasures, this trade will continue to grow.

We are in receipt of highly favorable news from Elk and Deep creeks, on the Middle Fork of John Day; also, from the mines in the river-bed of the main John Day, ten miles below Cañon City. One party from Elk Creek, brought down four pieces of gold, of which one was from Deep Creek and three from Elk Creek, either of which weighed over $100, at $17 50 an ounce. The average of diggings on the Middle Fork appears to be between $12 and $20 a day to the hand. On the main John Day, an average of $20 a day can be found over a large extent of ground. Another season promises to bring these mines into great repute, and they only require to be about four hundred miles further off to cause as much excitement as those of
