

A FEMALE DOCTOR.—Here is a woman who did keep a secret! She kept it all her life, and was only betrayed by death itself. It is, indeed a strange story, but it is no doubt true, as it comes from a reliable English paper: "An incident is just now being discussed in military circles so extraordinary that were not its truth capable of being vouched for by official authority, the narration would certainly be deemed absolutely incredible. Our officers quartered at the Cape, between fifteen and twenty years ago, may remember a certain Dr. Barry, attached to the medical staff there, and enjoying a reputation for considerable skill in his profession, especially for firmness, decision, and rapidity in different operations. This gentleman had entered the army in 1813, had passed, of course, through the grades of assistant surgeon and surgeon in various regiments, and had served as such in various quarters of the globe. His professional acquirements had procured for him his promotion to the staff at the Cape. He was clever and agreeable, save for the drawback of a most quarrelsome temper, and an inordinate addiction to argument. He was excessively plain, of feeble proportions, and labored under the imperfection of a ludicrously squeaking voice. Any natural 'chaffing' with regard to these, however, especially roused his ire, but was at length discontinued on his 'calling out' a persevering offender, and shooting him through the lungs. About 1840 he became promoted to be medical inspector, and was transferred to Malta. There he was equally distinguished by his skill and by his pugnacious propensities, the latter becoming so inconveniently developed upon the slightest difference of opinion with him that at last no notice was allowed to be taken of his fits of temper. He proceeded from Malta to Corfu, where he was quartered for many years, still conspicuous for the same peculiarities. When the government ceded the Ionian Islands to Greece, and the troops, of course, quitted the territory, Dr. Barry elected to leave the army and take up his residence for the rest of his days at Corfu. He there died about a month ago, and upon his death was discovered to be a woman! Very probably this discovery was elicited during the natural preparation for interment, but there seems to be an idea prevalent that either verbally, during the last illness, or by some writing, perused immediately after his (or we must still use the masculine,) death, he had begged to be buried without a post mortem examination of any sort. This, most likely, only aroused the curiosity of the two nurses who attended him, for it was to them it appears, that the disclosure of this mystery was owing. Under the circumstances, the fact was deemed so important that medical testimony was called in to report upon and record the truth. By this investigation not only was the assertion placed beyond a doubt, but it was equally brought to light that the individual in question had been a mother. This is all that is yet known of this extraordinary story. The motives that occasioned and the time when commenced this singular deception are both shrouded in mystery.

SENSIBLE SUGGESTION.—In a recent lecture the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher remarked:

Whatever is to come from without for the freedmen should, if possible, be so done as to carry the sympathy of southern men. Unnecessary offense, all irritations springing from severe words, and all appearances of intrusion that shall seem arrogant will rest upon the blacks. Legislation and Christian philanthropy in the North will do much, but more than all other influences for good or ill to the freedmen will be the kindness or the animosity of the people of the
