The Mexican express company, lately formed at New York, has agreed to transport Maximilian's military freight to and within Mexico and to act as his emigration agents, thus giving important aid to his usurpation. Is not this a violation of the neutrality laws? What should we have said if a company had been publicly organized in London, for the purpose of transporting war material to the South for the rebels? Yet Mr. Clarence Seward, nephew of the Secretary of State, and lately his assistant, is Secretary of this Mexican Express Company, which has agreed to afford Maximilian essential aid in overthrowing the legitimate government of Mexico, with which we hold friendly relations. Secretary Seward should look into this business.

Correct—M. Thiers descants thus on the office seeker: "Of all the appetites that curse young men, appetite for office seems to be the silliest and meanest. There is nothing which fills me with greater disgust than to see a young man eager for the poor distinction which an office confers. An office seeker, for the sake of honor, is constitutionally mean. I have seen men beg at twenty-one as presidential candidates in some small school districts, and stick to office until everybody was sick of them. Whether it rained porridge or potatoes, paying stores or pearls, their dish was always out. They and their families had to be cured for."

PARDON INCIDENTS.—Many amusing incidents might be recorded of pardon seekers at the White House. Recently, Hilliard, of Georgia, former minister to Belgium, rushed up to the President, seized his hand and implored his pardon would not be delayed. The President quietly remarked to the ex-reverend gentleman that "hope was the reward of the righteous," and vouchsafed no other reply. On another occasion, a rebel of some notoriety raised quite a laugh by saying: "I am now a good Union man, and emphatically one of you; but didn't Stonewall Jackson give us hell in the valley?"

DEFINITION OF A "BUS."—Buss, to kiss; rebuss, to kiss again; pluribus, to kiss to the hand instead of the lips; ambibus, to kiss the wrong person; omnibus, to kiss all the persons in the room; crebus, to kiss in the dark. Evidently the country girl who went down to the city recently had these definitions in her mind. A young gentleman was to escort her some distance through town, and not wishing to walk, he remarked, "Hold on, Mary—let's take a 'bus.'" But Mary, blushing to the eyebrows, drew back, and with wounded modesty replied, "Oh, George, not right here in the street!"
