

Daily Mountaineer.

STARTLING—The facetious local of an Iowa paper gets off the following good thing: The other night while we lay musing, and our weary brain confusing o'er the topics of the day, suddenly we heard a rattling, as of serried hosts a battling, as they mingled in the fray. "What is that?" We cried up-starting, and into the darkness darting, slap! we ran against the door. "Oh, 'tis nothing," Edward grumbled, as o'er a huge arm chair we stumbled, "'tis a bug, and nothing more." Then said we, our anger rising, (for we tho't it so surprising that a bug should thus offend) "Do you think, a small insect, sir, thus all the air would effect sir? No, 'tis not a bug, my friend." Now becoming sorely frightened round our waist our pants we tightened, and put on our coat and hat—when, into the darkness peering, saw with trembling and much fearing, the glaring eyes of Thomas Cat, B-q. With astonishment and wonder we gazed upon this son of thunder, as he sat upon the floor—when a resolution taking and a rapid movement making, lo! we opened wide the door. "Now clear out!" we hoarsely shouted, as o'erhead our boots we flouted, "take your presence from our floor." Then with air and mein majestic, this dear creature, called domestic, made his exit through the door. Made his exit without growling, neither was his voice heard howling, not a single word he said. And with feelings much elated to escape a doom so fated, slowly we went back to bed.

YOUNG GRIMES.—Old Grimes is dead, that good old man, we ne'er shall see him more; but he has left a son, who bears the name that old Grimes bore. He wears a coat of latest cut, his hat is now and gay; he cannot bear to view distress, so turns from it away. His pants are gaiters, fitting snug o'er pat-out leather shoes; his hair is by a barber curled, he smokes cigars and chews. A chain of massive gold is borne above his flashy vest, his clothes are better every day than were old Grimes' best. In fashion's courts he constant walks, where he delight doth shed; his hands are white and very soft but softer is his head. He's six feet tall no post more straight, his teeth are pearly white, in habits he is sometimes loose, and sometimes very tight. His manners are of sweetest grace, voice of softest tone; his diamond, 'tis the very one that old Grimes use to own. A dickey tall adorns his face, his neck a scarf of blue; he sometimes goes to church for change, and sleeps in Grimes' pow. He sports the fastest "crab" in town, is always quick to bet; he never knows who's President but thinks "Old Tip's" in yet. He has drunk wines of every kind, and liquors cold and hot; young Grimes' in short is just that sort of man old Grimes was not.

The number of printed volumes in the English language, in the State of California, was in 1847, scarcely three hundred. At the present time the number is estimated at two millions of volumes.

A WESTERN debating society lately discussed the question, whether a rooster's knowledge of daylight was the result of observation or instinct.
