

Daily Mountaineer.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 10, 1866.

A MINT is to be erected and put in operation at Carson City, Nevada, immediately.

THE movement to have Eight Hours declared a legal day's work is very popular in California. It ought to be so everywhere.

A COTEMPORARY says that when a man drinks he grows reckless. We suppose he means the more drams, the fewer scruples.

THE Democratic Review will hereafter be published by A. Noltner, the co-partnership of Noltner, Hicks & Belinger being dissolved.

WE are under obligations to Senator Williams, and E. D. Holbrook, Congressional Delegate from Idaho, for valuable public documents.

MEREDITH Brien committed suicide at Portland, by taking poison, on the 1st inst. He was formerly purser on a steamship in the Oregon and California trade.

GEN. MILLER, the Collector of Customs at San Francisco, has turned out of office some twenty civilians, and replaced them with veterans from the armies at the east.

A CALIFORNIA paper, alluding to a cotemporary, says that "he presides over the destinies of that town with a sleepless eye, and a rum-blossomed nose!"

HEADLEY and other biographers of the flowery inexact school, are writing the life of Gen. Grant. It would be a good idea for Grant to "move on their works," capture and destroy them.

It is reported that on the night of the 7th of January, the peaks of the Cascades Range known as the Three Sisters, were seen emitting smoke and flames.

THE Southern States jointly, severally and every other way, owe debts to England, to the amount of $128,000,000, upon which no interest has been paid for many years.

The Cincinnati Enquirer says paralysis has made sad havoc with General Joe Hooker, and that one side of his body has lost vitality and hangs flabby and loose.

CONTROLLER Clarke of the Currency Bureau has decided that ladies cannot act as directors of National banks, as the laws do not recognize them as citizens.

It is stated by the Astoria Marine Gazette that Alexander Campbell is not dead, but Duncan Campbell, of Kentucky, who is also a theologian of note. Alexander Campbell is still living in Western Virginia.

THE recent cold weather on the Pacific coast, may be termed moderate compared with the severity of the season on the Atlantic side. The thermometer one day, recently, at St. Paul, Minnesota, stood 80 degrees below zero.

A MOUNTAIN of salt has been discovered about thirty miles west of Austin, Nevada, and north of the New Pass Station. The salt is found in veins varying in thickness, and it is pronounced by those who have seen it, quite pure.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.
Mr. S. G. Reed, Vice President of the Oregon Steam Navigation Company, will proceed to the East upon the next steamer to represent to the directors of the Northern Pacific Railroad the propriety of commencing the construction of the line from this side, as well as from the east. This project commends itself to the intelligence of all who will carefully examine the subject; but we totally dissent from the initial point designated—White Bluffs—on this side. It must appear plain, however liberal the terms of transportation on the river may be, that the freight on rails, machinery, rolling-stock, and ten thousand articles of necessity, will go a long way towards constructing the road from some point below the Cascades on the navigable waters of the Columbia River to White Bluffs. The road, in fact, should begin on this side where ships can land the materials aboard of the cars. The economy of this plan will at once be seen. We say this with reluctance, as we know that local and personal interests would be better subserved by starting from White Bluffs; but we are equally certain that if that point is urged it will create a profound feeling of distrust in the minds of the leading spirits at the east connected with this great enterprise: they will certainly see in the proposition evidence of a desire to reap a temporary local advantage by the injudicious expenditure of money in transporting materials far inland to commence a railroad which is started with a view to span the continent. Having thus exposed ourselves, by ill-considered representations, to the charge of selfishness, we will see the evil fruits of it in the lack of that confidence so necessary to the vigorous prosecution of the work.

It is true that if the road is built mainly from the eastern side, we shall for a time feel the loss of the Montana trade; but that contingency is years ahead, by which time we shall have reaped the principal advantages of the development of that section. On the other hand, when the road is completed, the richly laden ships, coming from China and India, will bring to the mouth of the Columbia the trade for which the nations of the world have struggled for thirty centuries. In this we shall find abundant indemnity for the temporary lack of railroad facilities on the Pen d'Oreille Route to Montana.

As to White Bluffs, the enterprising inhabitants of that embryo city, will yet be compensated, for hope long deferred, in the eventual completion of the road, by which the trade of both hemispheres will be brought past their doors.

INTERNAL REVENUE.—According to the report of Commissioner Rollins, lately made to Congress, the total receipts of internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1863, were $111,003,192 83; for 1864, $116,850,672 44; for 1865, $209,991,835 91. These amounts are exclusive of the direct tax of twenty millions, levied in 1861, and the deposits and circulation of the National Banks.

Mr. Brooks, the Postal Agent, is "working" to ascertain the cause of irregularities between Portland and Vancouver. When he gets through with that Herculean task, we invite his attention to postal affairs in this direction.
