SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 7, 1866.

THE NEW CONVERTS.

In an article on the resolutions adopted by the Democratic State Convention of Indiana, endorsing President Johnson, the San Francisco Alta says two years ago these Democrats were resolving, with just as much fervor, that the Southern States had achieved their independence and were out of the Union. The great body of the people have as little respect for those who are now declaring that the Southern States are in the Union, though for four years they had been maintaining that they were out, as for the extremists who are asserting that they are out though for four years they had been shouting themselves hoarse that they were in—never went out and could not go out. It is possible that of the two extremes the greater contempt will be felt for those who have, within the last few months, become so devotedly attached to the American Union. Whatever change in the organization of parties the future may bring forth, one proposition may be laid down with certainty, that while this generation lasts no political combinations can be formed which will result in the elevation to place of those who had been notoriously unfaithful in the supreme hour of the country's peril. For the foundation upon which that proposition rests we search no further than the common sense of the great mass of the people. They will never be so short sighted as to place men in power who but a year ago lacked only the courage or the means to become their mortal enemies. As a natural consequence of the great crisis through which the country has passed, personal considerations hereafter will constitute a most important feature in all our political contests. Venomous Copperheads will never receive a loyal vote, no matter what side they may espouse. We admit that this term of reproach has not always been used with discrimination. Men have been called Copperheads simply because they did not endorse everything that was done from the beginning to the end of the war. Who the venomous Copperheads were, everybody knows, and can point out. They were those who mourned over every Union victory, rejoiced at every rebel success, and sided plainly and emphatically with the rebellion and against the Union. Their position is that of the Tories during the Revolution. They have made their own bed, and will have to lie thereon. If they should resolve to atone for their past treason by pursuing a loyal course, it will be regarded in the light of amendment, and that is all.—Their place is in the rear, in penitential attitude, striving with all their might to make up for their manifold sins and transgressions. There is no chance for leadership for them, so long as the present generation retain their senses. There is no boiling of the pot which can bring them to the top. It will be for them, so long as life continues, to discharge their duty, should they so resolve, to their country, in silence and without hope of reward or preferment.

If it should become necessary to form a party to support the Government of the United States in the new trial to which it has been subjected, it is only men of unquestioned loyalty who can originate and control it.—There may never be any necessity for such a step. From the first, we have adhered to the opinion that the questions now at issue should be decided inside of the Union organization, and we think that they will, unless the radicals go entirely crazy. They are now daily receding from their most advanced positions; but if passion should continue to rule the hour with them, no new party can be organized in this country but in the manner and upon the basis which we have stated. It does not follow, because conscientious men cannot sustain those who, contrary to all their previous professions, now assert that there are eleven States out of this Union, that they must put in power those who did all in their power to help them out, merely because they now say that they are in.

FORMALLY DECLARED.—The President has, by proclamation, formally declared the insurrection in the Southern States at an end. His proclamation is too long for our columns, but after enunciating in general terms that standing armies, military occupation, military law and tribunals, and the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, are, in times of peace, dangerous to public liberty, the proclamation concludes in these words:

Therefore, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim and declare, that the insurrection which has heretofore existed in the States of Georgia, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi and Florida, is at an end, and henceforth to be so regarded.

THEATRE.—We omitted to notice in yesterday's issue the arrival of Mr. Ward's excellent theatrical troupe. They performed last night to a very respectable house, and have announced for to-night two excellent pieces. Mrs. Phelps who is a member of the company, and who was always a favorite at the Dalles, has improved very much since her last visit to this place. The manner in which she sustained her part last night in "An Actress in Daylight," cannot be excelled. Mr. Phelps in Toodles, and in all his parts, was the same old Phelps; and in fact everybody, not to particularize, acquitted themselves well.

GOOD NEWS.—We are reliably informed that Postal Agent, Quincy A. Brooks, at Portland, has received a telegram from Washington to the effect that the postal route hence to Canyon City is established, and the contract for carrying the mails over it awarded to Messrs. Robbins, Wheeler & Weaver. Our many friends at the Canyon will rejoice at this, and we extend to them our congratulations, for they really deserved it long since. Let us now hope that troops enough will be put on the road to make it safe, and then that little matter will be all right.

NEW GOODS.—Mrs. Leaser has just returned from below with a large and carefully selected stock of millinery and dress makers goods, which she offers to the public at a small advance on cost. The ladies of the Dalles will bear this in mind and call and examine the goods before purchasing elsewhere.

Wasco Lodge, No. 15, A. F. & A. M.—Holds its stated Communication on the First and Third Mondays of each month, at their hall, in Dalles City. Brethren in good standing are invited to attend. SAT. L. POPE, Sec'y. By order of the W. M.

DENTAL NOTICE.—Being about to make a professional tour to the towns and settlements up the Columbia, I respectfully call the attention of those of my patrons who are in need of Dental Operations of any character, to the fact, so that they may have an opportunity to avail themselves of my services before my departure, if so desired. I will leave about the 20th of March, and return to this place to resume my practice, about the 18th of June. [271f] J. W. GURLEY.
