[COMPILED FROM THE OREGONIAN.]

DATES TO APRIL 14.

Chicago, April 13.—The Tennessee House of Representatives had an exciting session yesterday, ending with the newly elected radical members being admitted in sufficient numbers to make a quorum. After this the franchise bill passed by a constitutional vote. This bill relates only to white suffrage, but excludes rebels and rebel sympathizers under the most stringent penalties. The radical triumph was passed in defiance of the Speaker, who is a conservative, and who, to prevent proceedings which would have driven him from the chair, yielded the point and allowed a report from the committee on elections to be received in favor of all claimants except the recent bolters. These were not admitted on the ground that their election was in contempt of the House.—Some of the defeated radicals will be admitted on the revision of the poll list, excluding fraudulent voters.

Gov. Hamilton, of Texas, made a speech recently, in which he opposed some of the ordinance passed by the convention as not being republican, or meeting the demands made upon that body. They had passed but one ordinance which accorded fully with the President's policy, and that was the one declaring the war debt null and void. He appealed from the action of the convention to the people. The convention had passed an ordinance exempting all persons who, under authority of civil or military power, had inflicted injury on persons during the war from being held accountable. Such an act would not and should not shield them. He called upon the loyal people of the State to work together. He believed provision should be made to admit the negro to vote if he was educated. The convention had refused this, and also refused to give the blacks any quota of the school fund or to make provision for their education. They had been taxed to assist in sending their children to school. He intended to denounce to the people those who had worked against the interests of the State.

The Southern papers have vigorous articles on the Federal situation called out particularly by the civil rights bill. They counsel the people of the south to wait till Congress convenes and put all their trust in the President.

A joint resolution has passed the House, and is now pending in the Senate, appointing the following managers of the national asylum for disabled soldiers: Gov. R. J. Oglesby, of Illinois; Benj. F. Butler, of Massachusetts; and Gov. Frederick Smith, of New Hampshire—to serve six years; Lewis B. Garrick, of Ohio; Jay Cooke, of Pennsylvania; and P. J. Osterhaus, of Missouri—to serve four years; John H. Martindale, of New York; Horatio G. Stebbins, of California; and Geo. H. Walker, of Wisconsin—to serve two years.

Chicago, April 13.—Speaker Colfax, in responding to a serenade at Washington, on Tuesday evening, the 10th inst., said that he was prouder than ever of the great Union party since the Civil Rights Bill passed. He believed that it would never be repealed, and in future years would be the proudest recollection of those supporting it. We are sometimes asked—we know with what solicitude the people regarded it—why the work was delayed? I answer, it has not been by the President. During eight months before the assembly of Congress he was engaged in collecting testimony, comparing opinions and maturing action to lay a sure foundation for Union, peace and prosperity. Congress by its test oath and by declaring that the electoral votes of any State that had been in the rebellion should not be counted, had already indicated the policy to be adopted and fully in view of their future reconstruction, had plainly indicated to the rebels, our right to declare the qualifications of both individuals and States. My regret is that Congress was not called together early last summer in order that Congress and the President might have acted together as they doubtless would have done in harmony; but the President deemed it inexpedient to convene Congress and went on alone. I believe he entered upon and proceeded with the work patriotically, and that he thought as an experiment it would be well to test it before Congress met. I am confirmed in this belief by the messages which he sent to the Governors of Florida and Mississippi telling them that restoration would depend on Congress. As an experiment, however, I don't think it resulted in developing their loyalty. When Congress assembled it appointed a committee to examine the condition of the South. Congress alone could legalize what the President had done, but it had no official information from him concerning what he had done during the recess. This information, after repeated calls, was received only one short month ago. You will ask what is my policy of reconstruction. I answer, it is the policy laid down by Andrew Johnson, with such emphasis and earnestness in his speeches between June, 1864, and May, 1865; that the loyal men shall govern the preserved Republic.
